NEW RULE TO PREVENT FILIBUSTERING ADOPTED

Conference of Republicans and Democrats Agree On the Plan

DEMAND BY TWO THIRDS

Of Senate Would Close Debate and Bring Measure To Vote

Washington, March 6.—Modification of the senate rules to prevent filibustering was agreed on tonight by a conference committee of republicans and democrats named by party caucuses.

The proposed change would give two-thirds of the senators power to shut off dilitatory tactics.

A resolution embodying the change will be presented to the senate for action as soon as possible.

Leaders championing the change expect the resolution to receive the necessary caucus endorsement.

Vice President Marshall virtually served notice that he will not be a party to the rules fight, declaring that the constitution has made it plain that the vice president has nothing to do with the rules except to see that they are enforced.

Both caucuses did the usual presession business.

The democrats elected Senator Saulsbury president pro tempore and Senator Martin floor leader.

Senator Borah, one of the republican conferees, pointed out that the proposed rule would be seldom evoked and then only to prevent the defeat of legislation by a few men.

This is expected to induce southern senators, who always feared a force bill if cloture were possible, with republicans to control, not to object.

TAX COLLECTOR INVESTIGATED

Washington County Official Is Brought Before the Governor On Charges

(Special to The Herald.)

Tallahassee, March 6.—More than a score of citizens of Washington county are here, today, to ask the governor to investigate Tax Collector D. T. White, of that county, whose acts they allege, were unbecoming an offical in connection with the heated court house removal fight, there, which will end in an election on the twentieth.

They claim irregularities in payment of poll taxes. No charges were formally made, but an investigation by the governor was demanded.

Senator Trammell has announced that J. Locke Kelly, of Marianna, will be his private secretary.

President Menocal stated, tonight, that reports issued in New York and Washington on the revolt were greatly exaggerated by revolutionary sympathizers.

APPAM MUST BE RESTORED

Supreme Court Decides Vessel Captured By Germans Belong To British

Washington, March 6—The supreme court today decreed the restoration to British owners of the liner Appam and her cargo, valued at between three and four million dollars, brought into Hampton Roads more than a year ago, by a prize crew from the German raider Moewe.

The court held that an unaccompanied prize cannot remain indefinitely in American waters.

Interpretation, for the first time, by the supreme court of the treaties of 1799 and 1828 between the United States and Germany was sought in two cases determining possession of the British liner Appam, captured January 15, 1916, by the German raider Moewe and taken to Newport News, Va., by a prize crew under Lieutenant Hans Berg.

Almost from the moment that the liner passed into Hampton Roads, February 1, 1916, after a trans-Atlantic dash of 3,051 miles, the legal contest for possession of ship and cargo began. Together their value is estimated between $3,000,000 and $4,000,000, constituting one of the richest single prizes of the war.

Right to asylum in American waters until the war ends, or failing that, to have disposition of the vessel and cargo determined by the state department and German government, was claimed by the German captors.

In an admiralty libel suit, attaching the Appam and her cargo, the British and African Steamship company, British owners, sought repossession. They denied that German-American treaties or international law gave the German claimants authority to retain the prize.

The German government, claiming the Appam as a public ship of war belonging by its capture to the government, was the real defendant in the libel suit, although Lieutenant Berg, prize master, and German Vice Consul von Schilling, of Norfolk, Va., were the nominal claimants.

The British owners were successful in the lower court. Return of vessel and cargo was ordered in July, 1916, by Federal District Judge Waddill, of Virginia. The manner of bringing the Appam into United States waters Judge Waddill held a violation of American neutrality. He interpreted the German-American treaties to give no permanent, but only a temporary, right to American asylum to German war prizes.

Upon appeal to the supreme court, bond for $2,000,000 was given by the German claimants to retain possession, under supervision of Virginia court officials. Receipts of $634,000 from court sale of perishable cargo have been held by the lower court awaiting the Supreme Court's final decision.

The Appam was appraised at $1,250,000. She is 440 feet long and of 7,800 tons. Her cargo, from the west African coast, was estimated at between $2,000,000 and $3,000,000. In addition about $1,000,000 in gold bullion was reported to have been taken off by the Moewe, which was commanded by Count Zu Dohna and captured several British ships during a brief but active raiding tour.

The Appam's capture was regarded as one of the most spectacular sea exploits of the war. Intercepted off the Maderia Islands while en route from Dakar, Africa, to Liverpool, Lieutenant Hans Berg and his prize crew of twenty-two men ran the vessel, with lights out, across the Atlantic.

Bombs were placed throughout the vessel and the vessel's crew of about 160 and also 350 passengers were kept under subjection by threats of the captors to blow up the ship upon interference.

The Appam arrived at Hampton Roads with supplies exhausted, but seaworthy. The libel suit of the British owners was immediately begun and because of the unique and important questions involved the case was expedited for hearing before the supreme court last January.

What Army Training Did In Five Months

Lieutenant-Colonel James B. Allison of the Second South Carolina Infantry, now in the federal service at El Paso, Tex., shows these two photographs as the most pronounced evidence of the good in universal military training.

From left to right: Private Tobe White, Company K, First North Carolina Infantry, who comes from Buncombe County of that state, and Private W. C. Bryson of the same company.

The photo on the left was taken at Camp Glenn, Morehead City N. C., last August, while the one at the right shows the same two men January 20, 1917, five months later, at Camp Stewart, Tex., showing White a gainer by thirty pounds and Bryson heavier by fifty pounds.

Lieutenant-Colonel Allison says, "To my mind there is no stronger evidence of what military service will do—and I am prepared to say that this is no special exception of improvement in physical appearance throughout the National Guard."

LETTER HOME MADE TROUBLE

Private Sent To Prison For Five Years Furnishing Information To Germany

Minneapolis, March 6.—Officers of the first Minnesota regiment, returning today from the border, announced that Private Paul L. Scharfenberg was sentenced to five years at Fort Leavenworth prison by a court martial at San Antonio, on a charge of furnishing military information to Germany.

Officers say that a letter to Scharfenberg's relatives in Germany, asserting that ten million Germans in this country are ready to rise against the government in the event of war, was intercepted by the British and turned over to the United States.

The officers say that the letter predicted that President Wilson would "soon be put out of the way."

Indian Committee Leave Washington Saturday To Look After the Seminoles

(Special to The Herald.)

Washington, March 6.—The Indian committee of the house of representatives will leave Washington at three o'clock Saturday afternoon, for Florida, to look into the conditions surrounding the Seminole Indians.

The party has been urged to take this tour by Congressman Sears so they will have a five hour lay over at Jacksonville, during which he will have them pay a sightseeing visit to Jacksonville and St. Augustine.

The party will consist of Congressmen Dill, Gandy, Ellsworth, Tillman, Carter, Hastings and Hayden, of the committee, and Congressman Sears.

The trip is being taken on the insistence of Mr. Sears, who hopes to have the committee visit West Palm Beach, Fort Pierce, Ft. Lauderdale and some other places, near where Florida Seminoles reside.

Mr. Sears hopes through the committee to have congress furnish the Florida Seminoles with land in Florida, either by giving them government land or purchasing land from state, so that the Indians can remain in Florida instead of being forced to go west with other Seminoles.

COURT HOLDS FOR THE U.S.

Decision Is Against Importers In Five Per Cent Discount Cases

Washington, March 6. — The supreme court decided in favor of the government today, against importers on the "five per cent discount" cases.

The government sought to have the tariff provision for discount in duties on merchandise in American vessels declared inoperative.

The so-called "five per cent" cases came before the supreme court through a clause in the tariff law which authorized reductions of five per cent on duties on all merchandise imported in American ships. All nations with which the United States has the so-called "favored nation" clause in commercial treaties protested against the provision as a discrimination and a violation of treaty provisions. Nations which did not have such treaties also made protests, and the operation of the law was held up while the cases were taken through the lower courts and up to the supreme court.

Meanwhile, the regular duties were collected, until the federal treasury amassed between $25,000,000 and $30,000,000 which has been held ready to return to importers in case the court decided the clause was invalid.

CONGRESS TO MEET IN JUNE

Is Confidently Expected Although President Has Not Given Up Hope of Avoiding It

Washington, March 6.—An extra session of congress not later than June is generally conceded among officals here to be assured.

Although the president has not given any indication that he has abandoned the hope that an extra session might be avoided, congressmen declare that congress must come back to fill the gaps in the financial scheme caused by the failure of the appropriation bills.

Should the senate limit debate and the president's legal advisers decide that he has no authoirity to arm vessels without congressional authority, the armed neutrality bill will undoubtedly be pressed first at the extra session.

TORONTO ENGAGEMENT BY THE BOSTON BRAVES

WERMER HORN MUST BE TRIED

German Who Blew Up Bridge Is Amenable To the United States Law

Washington, March 6—The supreme court today denied the writ of habeas corpus to Werner Horn, charged with dynamiting the international bridge at Vanceboro, Maine.

The trial at Boston of Werner Horn, held in connection with an attempt to dynamite the Canadian Pacific railway bridge across the St. Croix river on February 2, 1915, was suspended by Horn's habeas corpus suit. Under a federal indictment charging unlawful transportation of explosives from New York through Massachusetts to Vanceboro, Me., the American terminus of the international bridge, Horn has been in jail at Boston in default of $10,000 bail.

Horn appealed to the supreme court from rejection of his habeas corpus plea by Federal District Judges Putnam and Hale of Maine, and Morton of Massachusetts. Their dismissals were affirmed by the first circuit court of appeals. Alleging that the dismissals were improper and that he was denied fair hearings before the Maine federal courts and immigration officials at Bangor and Portland when extradited to Boston, Horn asked the supreme court either to discharge him from custody on the ground that he is exempt from punishment in United States courts, or that he be returned to Maine for proceedings "in accord with law and justice."

Although the Canadian authorities asked Horn's extradition, he was held for trial on the charge of unlawfully carrying dynamite on passenger trains to blow up the bridge, which was damaged, though not seriously, and only on the Canadian side. After the explosion Horn was arrseted at Vanceboro and admitted the dynamiting, declaring he was first lieutenant in the German Landwehr or reserve army, a citizen of Germany, and acted as a belligerent to cut off shipment of war munitions.

Immunity from prosecution in the United States federal courts on the charge of interstate transportation of explosives was claimed by Horn. He contended that mere possession alone of his reserve army commission operated to give such exemption—while in commission of an alleged "public" and belligerent act of war against an enemy of Germany. He contended that his authority to act was implied and that express authorization or command from his government was unnecessary. Although the German government has not avowed responsibility for his acts, Horn contended that he could not be punished in American courts and was punishable only for violation of American neutrality.

Refusal of Federal Judges Hale and Putnam to entertain or permit filing of his habeas corpus suit also was set up by Horn as ground for release from Boston and return to Maine. Denial of constitutional rights of habeas corpus was alleged.

That Horn, even though a German army officer, is punishable for infraction of United States civil law although upon an enterprise against an enemy of Germany, was contended by the department of justice in the supreme court proceedings. Lack of authority from or avowal of responsibility by the German government for Horn's acts also was set up by the government.

Will Be First Meeting of Major League Teams On Canadian Soil

FUTURE MIAMI GAMES

Philadelphia Americans At Tatum Park This Month—Boston In Good Form

When the Boston Braves and the St. Louis Browns meet on a Toronto, Can., field on the 31st day of May, the meeting will be the first ever taking place in Canada between two baseball clubs of the Major leagues, and consequently much interest attaches to the concluding of negotiations yesterday for this contest between the east and west in this northern city.

Telegrams were exchanged between the business manager of the St. Louis American team, and Walter E. Hapgood, business manager of the Boston Nationals, now in Miami, yesterday, and last night the series of games was assured.

Arrangements have also been under way for several games in Havana on the 17th, 18th and 19th, between the Braves and the best team that Cuba can get together to meet them, but it is doubtful if this series will be played unless the political atmosphere in Cuba clears materially by the middle of the month.

The powers controlling the affairs of the Bostonians are not looking for trouble of the nature now making the smoke curl upward from the Latin American island, although willing to meet anything that looks like a baseball club.

Meet Americans Here

But when it comes to taking on the Mackmen for a series of three games, the Braves are right there with the goods, and will entertain the Philadelphia Americans at Tatum Park during the 22nd, 23rd and 24th of March, and on the night of the 24th, both teams will board the same train and occupy the four pullmans to be provided for them, and then start on their broken journey toward their respective cities, stopping along the way side to take on the pride of intervening villages in exhibition games.

In the meantime, daily games will occur at Tatum Park between the first and second string players of the Boston National league team, who arrived Sunday and Monday. These games are fully up to the standard set by the majors, as every person witnessing the playing last winter at Tatum Park knows. Consequently the daily attendance is expected to be large.

Watch the Practice

Seventy-five fans occupied seats in the grandstand yesterday when the Braves warmed up. Many were from Boston and other New England towns, and went out to the training camp to get a little pre-season dope on how the players may be expected to show up when the official season opens.

Probably the most enthusiastic fan to be found anywhere on the globe is the Boston fan who sits in the grandstand away down in Miami and watches the Braves getting into shape for the grand rush for the National league flag. It was so last year, and surely it will be true this season.

But the Boston fans have nothing on the Miami fans when it comes to admiration for the Braves neither do they boost any more enthusiastically nor pray more fervently for the victory of the Braves than the Miami fans do. The only reason there were more sore hearts in Boston than in Miami last year when the crippled Braves went down to defeat is that Boston has a greater population.

The few stragglers who failed to arrive with the team Monday morning are now beginning to come in. Joe Wilhoit arrived yesterday to again hold down a position in the outfield. Frank Allen and Tom Hughes are expected today and if Hank Gowdy can pull himself out of the ocean long enough for his bathing suit to get dry, he will come down from Palm Beach today or tomorrow.

In Fine Condition

Taken as a whole the players are in better condition this year than at the beginning of last season, and should have little difficulty in getting into form, and should leave Miami for Boston in even better fettle if possible than when they started their season in 1916. Pat Ragon, one of the Braves' best pitchers, is twelve pounds lighter now than last spring. He has been putting in some hard work on his Nebraska ranch, rounding up cattle and roughing it generally. Since the atmosphere in Mexico became unhealthful for Americans, Ragon has surrendered his right to be called "Don Carlos," a title given him by associates and newspaper writers, because of the ownership of a ranch in Mexico, and he now confines his activities to Nebraska.

The Braves will go into the game this season with the same strong infield as last spring, consisting of Ed Konetchy at first base Captain Johnny Evers, second base; Red Smith, third

AUSTRIA IS CONCILIATORY

Defends Unrestricted Submarine Warfare, But Is Not Operating Against Us

Washington, March 6.—Austria's reply to the American request for a clearer definition of Austria's attitude toward the submarine situation, stated officially, leaves the door open for further negotiations, delaying temporarily at least a break.

The communication in substance upholds and defends the unrestricted German warfare, but is couched in friendly terms and points out that Austrian submarines are operating solely in the Adriatic and the Mediterranean, and encroachment on American interests is hardly to be feared.

The United States will reply to the note, and, unless an overt act precipitates a rupture, which both sides apparently are anxious to avoid, the United States is not inclined to force the issue at present.

Germany is credited here with trying to force Austria to a step that country does not wish to take. Austria is placed in a delicate position, either sacrificing benefits from a continuance of existing relations or of not fully supporting her ally.

It is believed Austria has made her note as strong an endorsement of Germany as possible without making it impossible for the United States to continue negotiations.

SAW ZEPPELIN AIR RAIDERS IN ATTACKS

Harry Perry of Denver Tells His Experiences—Says War Will Be A Draw

Harry H. Perry, of Denver, Colorado, who recently returned from a stay of seven years in Europe with Frank A. Vardon, his partner in vaudeville, has arrived to remain in Miami for a week with his father, A. L. Perry, 1,300 avenue J, and was an interesting visitor to the Herald office last night.

Since the outbreak of the war Mr. Perry and Mr. Vardon have passed the greater part of their time in England, Scotland and Ireland but made one visit to South Africa. They found that their business, as entertainers, fared badly during the first year of the war, but now conditions have changed greatly, and the Britishers are attending shows as never before.

This condition, Mr. Perry believes, is caused by the fact that there is more money in circulation than ever before, women and children working in the munitions plants receiving higher wages than the men received before the war.

Asked what he thought would be the result of the great conflict, Mr. Perry said neither side would win. The war, he thought, would be a stand off. The British, however, are confident they will win.

Mr. Perry declared that the Zeppelin attacks on England have been failures so far as the destruction of public buildings and munitions plants, ship building yards and other properties of military importance are concerned. He added that the people run out into the streets to gaze up whenever a Zeppelin is sighted, and seem to have no fear of them. He has witnessed two attacks by dreadnaughts of the air.

"I can think of no way to describe the experience of a Zeppelin attack in London," he said, "except that I felt as if I was in an American baseball crowd, rooting for the home team. Most of the people stand in the streets watching the air battle and if the anti-aircraft guns or the British fliers defeat the Zeppelins, they cheer madly.

"Zeppelins dropped bombs within two hundred feet of the theatre in which we were playing one night. The manager went before the curtain and asked the people to go out quietly as the Germans were overhead. They did so, but when they got out in the streets they rooted for the home guard to drive the enemy off, like a bunch of fans. We rooted with them."

The British have no great fear of the submarine menace, Mr. Perry declared, as they have captured a large number of under-sea craft in nets and by other means. He told of one brought into the Thames river, where the curious were charged a small fee for the privilege of a peek, the money so derived going for charitable purposes.

SENATORS ARE NOW DODGING

Declare They Were Not Responsible For Killing the Armed Neutrality Bill

Washington, March 6.—No decision has been reached on whether the president has authority to arm American merchantmen without congressional action.

An authoritive intimation is given that the president is seeking a way to take the step on his own responsibility but would act only after mature deliberation.

President Wilson conferred with Secretaries Lansing and Daniels, but the cabinet meeting was cancelled and in some quarters it is believed no announcement will be made before Friday.

Senator Lodge attempted to introduce an armed neutrality bill today, but was prevented by the point of order that the senate could not consider it because the house was not sitting.

Senate sittings were enlivened by speeches by Wardaman and Kenyon, who said they were not in complicity to prevent a vote on the bill.

John Sharp Williams replied, saying the president was right in his criticism of the few senators who killed the bill.

News received from New York said O'Gormon denied participation in the filibuster and said he had taken up only five minutes time during the three days' session.

FENBY THROWS CUTLER

Ernest Fenby, champion heavyweight wrestler of Michigan, threw Marty Cutler, of Chicago, two straight falls at the Seminole Athletic association gymnasium last night. The first fall came at the end of thirty-four minutes of clever work, as the result of a bar lock and half Nelson. A leg toe hold turned the second trick.

The men were evenly matched and put up a good show.

SIGMA NU AT DELAND

Arrangements have been completed for the state convention of the college fraternity, Sigma Nu, in DeLand on March 16th, 17th and 18th, which will probably be attended by at least half a dozen of the twelve or more members of Sigma Nu in Miami.

An automobile tour of the coast, including Daytona, Ormond, the Clarendon and other points of interest, will be had on Sunday.

This will be the third annual state convention and is expected to be largely attended. Many of the high officers of the fraternity will be present.

Sigma Nu members in Miami include County Judge Samuel Barco, Dan Squires, George McCaskill, J. E. Junkin, Jr., Harold Atkisson, Jr. A. Rosenberg, R. B. Gautier, J. Willis Junkin, Lawrence Gautier, F. B. Kurtz, R. M. Griffin and John Swenson.

A LIVELY CAMPAIGN FOR THREE DAYS BY CHAMBER COMMERCE

While it is the intention of the Chamber of Commerce membership committees who began work yesterday to try and greatly increase the membership of the organization during the three days of their campaign, to make no report in full of the result until the end of the third day, it became known that one committee at least had perfect success.

This committee, of which President E. G. Sewell is chairman solicited twelve persons to become members, and every one of the twelve joined and gave the committeemen their checks for twenty-five dollars to cover one year's dues.

Mr. Sewell believes that the people of Miami and the visitors having property interests here will feel so appreciative of the good work done by the Chamber during the past year that they will show this appreciation by joining the ranks of the body's membership.

Real Joyous Gypsy Dance Last Night's Social Event Biscayne Bay Yacht Club

A hilarious gathering of Romany lads and lassies, real gypsy folk all, some with a tendency toward piracy, it is true, made the dance at the Biscayne Bay yacht club last night a noteworthy frolic.

Bandanna headdress,es huge earrings, rainbow sashes and scarves, black boleros and crossed shawls and a bewildering variety of head coverings made the dance floor a shifting medley of color, as if at least two dozen large rainbows had suddenly exploded.

Between fortune telling—or of course one should say, penning dukkerin—and the glib talk of the pirates, with their doubloons, pieces of eight, hidden treasure and similar reminiscences of gold and blood, the conversation that ran high between dances was a piquant and exciting thing.

The usual yacht club refreshments produced the usual informal gathering about the buffets later in the evening from which only further dance can drag one.

Among the many at the jolly dance, who rejoiced openly in the chance to frolic it in their brilliant costumes were Commodore and Mrs. Matheson, Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Matheson, Mr. and Mrs. Malcolm Matheson, Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Snowden, Mr. and Mrs. R. C. Fulton, Mr. and Mrs. Manning Burbank, Mr. and Mrs. Gaston Drake, Mr. and Mrs. E. G. Sewell, Mr. and Mrs. Frank B. Shutts, Mr. and Mrs. Carl Fisher, Mr. and Mrs. E. A. Waddell, Mr. and Mrs. R. M. Price, Mr. and Mrs. Mitchell Price, Mr. and Mrs. George Romfh, Judge and Mrs. John Gramling, M. and Mme Roberto, Gen and Mrs. Baldwin Day Spilman, Mr. and Mrs. Allyn, Mr. and Mrs. W. W. Culbertson, Mr. Paul Chalfin, Mr. Louis Koons, Mr. Frank Riggs, Mr. Joseph Greaves, Mr. J. R. Watson and many others.

ADDRESSES YESTERDAY BEFORE WOMAN'S CLUB ON TEMPERANCE QUESTION

The regular meeting of the Woman's Club yesterday afternoon was turned over to the Miami Woman's Christian Temperance Union, and a gathering of women listened to the two main addresses with much interest.

The first talk of the afternoon was given by Mrs. Rose B. Seeley, whose subject was "The State and National Issue—a Call to Patriotism." In introducing her subject Mrs. Seeley said: "In endeavoring to respond to the call of the subject before us this afternoon, it is not my intention to enter into a discussion as to either the moral or economic issues of this great temperance reform, but perhaps more from a patriotic viewpoint as it stands today in relation to our own and other nations.

"The call of the temperance and prohibition reform is the challenge of highest patriotism and well has Dabiel Polling said: "America faces today the mightiest domestic and foreign problems of her eventful; history. Industrial unrest, the masterful questions of our great cities, the hunger cries, the grinding of these problems and others beyond number seethe in the caldron of domestic disquietude.

Mrs. Seeley continued with a vivid description of the onward march of prohibition, recounting the work done in the various states, and concluded with an appeal for the National Prohibition amendment.

Dr. J. L. White, who followed Mrs. Seeley, gave an able talk upon recent temperance legislation, reviewing the gradual increase in the idea of prohibitory legislation and making a graphic resume of the most recent state and federal laws which bear upon the subject.

Miss Myrtle Travis, accompanied by Mrs. Elizabeth Edwards of Chicago, sang delightfully as a fitting conclusion to the afternoon.

A most important business meeting and the annual election of officers took place last night at the house of the Busintss Woman's League.

Reports from the "Irish Cinderella" showed, with all bills paid, that the very successful play added two hundred dollars to the treasury. A rising vote of thanks was given to Mr. and Mrs. Al F. Strouse and votes of thanks, to be sent, were given to the principals in the cast to whose kindness the success of the play was due.

It was decided that the annual banquet should be held on the Thursday after Easter, the place to be announced later. This banquet will take the form of the first birthday party and the formal installation of officers.

THE DIFFERENCE

Some person, who evidently is ashamed of his attitude, sends The Herald a garbled clipping of its own Monday morning headlines, and asks "Do you know of any reason why England should not be held to strict accountability for robbing our mails, for blackmailing our cities, for stealing our food?" to which question the timid correspondent neglected to sign his name.

The Herald does not known of any reason why England should not be held to strict accountability for the things the correspondent charges, neither does it know that the things charged have occured, as is inferred. The Herald does not know that England has robbed our mails, blackmailed any of our cities or stolen any of our food, and by the same token neither does its annoymous correspondent.

What The Herald does know, for it has the authentic reports of the cases, is that Great Britain has detained mails coming to an leaving the United States and that its censor has held them up for examination and has examined them; it knows that, for a time, there was an effort to place certain firms, doing business in the United States, on what might be called a blacklist as a notice to the British people not to do business with them, because those same firms or corporations were trading with a country at war with Great Britain; it does not know that England has ever stolen our food, and this is the first it has ever heard of the charge.

Now, The Herald could make out a very much better case against Great Britain than has the unknown correspondent and what it would charge is a matter of record and fully establishes that Great Britain has committed many very aggravating outrages on our commerce, on our mails and on our people, and could prove them by authentic admissions of high British officials. For these things that can be proven, for the things done contrary to international law and which have caused this country or the people of the United States loss and damage. The Herald believes that Great Britain ought to be, and will be, held to strict accountability.

What the correspondent is trying to show, and that is the only reason why this paper pays any attention to a writer who fears to make known his identity, is that the cases with Great Britain and Germany are identical. Nothing could be farther from the facts and the law.

In every instance where Great Britain has detained an American vessel, that vessel has been taken into the nearest home port and the matter of its rightfulness in carrying certain cargoes, adjudicated by a prize court, in accordance with international law. Where the mails have been detained, they have all been subject to the local laws of Great Britain, which correspond to our own. Where any of the things that have occured, by which we have been damaged, they have been conducted under the forms of law, at least.

Great Britain has not sunk an American vessel, with or without warning; she has not caused the loss of a single American life and, so far as she is concerned, we are as safe in sailing the open oceans, today, as we were before the war began.

But with Germany things are entirely different. The indictment against Germany is full and complete. She has sunk American and other neutral vessels without warning and has recently issued an order that attempts to exclude American vessels from parts of the ocean to which they have a right and has announced that vessels venturing within the forbidden zone will be sunk without parley. Her infamous submarine warfare has caused the death of scores of American citizens and unless she is restrained, will cause the death of many more.

Great Britain is to be held to strict accountability for the business and property loss which she has inflicted upon us. She has no American lives to account for. The business and property loss can be adjudicated in courts and the loss made good to those whose property has been detained or destroyed.

Germany is also to be held to strict accountability, not only for the property loss, but for the loss of precious American lives which she has caused. The property loss can be paid for, but nothing in the world can ever restore to us those whose lives have gone out in Germany's vicious war against us.

That is the difference between holding Great Britain to accountability and holding Germany responsible for what she has done, as we are going to do in both cases.

BEGIN RIGHT

As an elementary step toward securing a systematic building of the city, those things ought to be first attempted that do not cost large amounts of money, and yet ought to be in line with what will be carried out later.

With Miami growing as rapidly as she is, there is an insistent demand for the improvements that provide sewers, pavements, sidewalks, lights, water mains all of the things that might be called the essentials. This demand requires that the city authorities spend a very large amount of money, and as the city increases the demands enlarge and still greater amounts of money are required.

Consequently, those things that are deemed luxuries, parks, breathing places, playgrounds, boulevards, trees, shrubbery and flowers, must await the happy time when the city is more amply in funds.

The fact that we are compelled to do without some of the things, now, that we would like to have and that many of us deem necessary, emphasizes the necessity for some definite plan being adopted to which the city can grow as the funds are available. We are in the position of a certain parish of which the writer once knew where the parishioners desired to build a new church. It had funds to provide a considerable part of the building and wanted to commence at once. It had a wise rector who prevailed on the vestry first to adopt a certain well thought out plan, even to the stained glass windows inside furnishings and decorations. This was done, and the parish went to work. For a long time it used only the bare walls of the church. As it secured the money it made some advance on the plan that was adopted. Finally, after a number of years, the church was completed, adorned and furnished according to the original plans, and the congregation has a commodious, delightful, evenly balanced and artistic church in which to worship. If the original plan had not been adopted, the building would have been thrown together in a rather haphazzard way, its decorations would not have corresponded with the building and its finishings with neither.

So, with this city of ours. If we plan now, whether we have the money immediately to complete our plans or not, we will eventually work out a systematically developed city, modern in its details and artistic in its design.

There are many suggestions that could be made as to needed plans, and The Herald earnestly hopes that those who love Miami and have hopes for her future will begin now to agitate for a regular and systematic plan of development and will assist on carrying it out.

GUARD THE CHILDREN

Complaints come to The Herald from teachers in the public schools that, seemingly, automobilists regard the streets around school houses as their especial race tracks, and govern themselves accordingly.

It seems inconprehensible that people who drive automobiles should not exercise all possible care while in the vicinity of school houses, where there are hundreds of small children daily exposed to the dangers of the street.

Irresponsible children cannot be expected to take full care of themselves. We cannot expect the children, who rush out of our schools, to be as thoughtful of themselves and as guarded against danger as are older people who have had experience. The inclination of childhood to be careless, headless and even reckless must be taken into consideration.

One who, therefore, drives an automobile anywhere in the vicinity of a school house is under a double obligation to use extreme care. Even the ordinary care exercised in other places will not do. No chances must be taken where little children are involved.

The city authorities should see to it that automobilist slow down when approaching the locations of school buildings and any one who shows a disposition to be reckless in driving at undue speed under conditions surrounding school houses, should be dealt with promptly, and effectively.

A SORT OF A REFERENDUM

Pacifists are urgent that before this country shall declare war congress call for a referendum on the question by the people.

There is a question before the people of the United States in the propositions now before congress universal military training on which the pacifists are given a chance to have a certain form of referendum.

The National Security League, which as its name implies, is an organization dealing with the defenses of the country, is supporting measures on the senate calendar calling for the military training of boys of nineteen and upward, throughout the country.

It has addressed a communication to the mayors of all cities of the United States of a population of five thousand and over, asking if the question of universal military training had been discussed in the cities; the mayors are asked if they believe their cities would endorse their senators and congressmen if they voted for a bill enforcing universal training; how the newspapers in the cities stand on the question; has the proposed plan any emphatic opponents or supporters in the cities, and each mayor is asked for his personal opinion on the subject.

There is a chance for the pacifists to manufacture sentiment in their especial localities, for it is easy enough to influence a mayor who is looking for re-election and it is just as difficult for him to size up the real opinions of the city over which he presides as it is any ordinary layman of the city.

The Herald ventures to say that if a referendum, a fair one, were taken in Miami, the city would now be overwhelmingly in favor of some plan to secure competant and universal military training for the young men of the country.

Fortunately, the National Security League has provided another way to secure the opinion of the people probably to be check up such returns from the mayors as they may possibly receive.

All police courts records were broken on Monday morning when His Honor was compelled to try over sixty cases. As the usual proportion of "drunk and disorderly" cases appeared on the docket, there is a suspicion that the blind tiger is much more active than he ought to be in any well ordered community.

Those nine senators, remaining out of the twelve who prevented the president from arming merchant vessels, will probably try to talk that proposed cloture rule to death, too.

By skillful management the local weatherman prevented a cold wave from reaching us from the north, on Monday night, for which our thanks are due.

The Swedish government asked for an appropriation from parliament to perserve the neutrality of the nation, which was refused, and it may possibly be inferred that Sweden is becoming weary of preserving its neutrality.

We can name three former senators whose terms expired Sunday noon, who need not line up in the lame duck bread line.

CITY PLANNING.

Miami, Fla., March 6, 1917.

Editor of Herald:

Allow me to express my hearty approval of your editorial in this mornings issue on City Planning. Many times this winter I have been looked at as almost a traitor to this city because I suggested the things you stated so clearly.

In one instance I was both amused and disgusted at the ignorance of a young salesman in one of the largest city real estate offices.

I happened to mention how much more foresight St. Petersburg had shown in preparing for the future than Miami had and he took me to task for daring to compare the two.

"Have you seen St. Petersburg" I asked him. He had not. He gave me an excellent opening to read him a lecture in a few words on his own profession—"Salesmanship," which is "Good salesmen do not knock their competitors."

"Good salesmanship requires a knowledge of a competitor's article."

A delegation came to Miami from St. Petersburg to see what this city had that she did not.

Has Miami returned the visit? If not why not?

Yours respectfully,
F. L. SMALL.

NATIONAL PRESS

When people stop buying an article, whether securities or eggs, because the price seems to them too high, or is, as a fact, beyond their means, they boycott it in effect, even though they act individually instead of in throngs. The effect of this kind of a boycott, the refusal to pay the asking price, is usually to bring prices down. This is the effect in Wall street, though the commodities there dealt in are not perishable. In merchandise it generally brings the price down unless the actual cost of the commodities is such that the dealers do not care whether they do business or not. A large part of the rise in prices is due to the fact that the community has more money to spend than it ever had before, and when asked higher prices, pays them. If it will stop paying them, and will use cheaper articles, the chances are very much in favor of lower prices.

Chicago Journal.

Every man who calls or attends "peace meetings" at a time like this strengthens the hands of the kaiser against the president. There are no peace meetings in Berlin. Every speaker who shrieks for peace at any price is helping to make that price higher than any self-respecting nation can afford to pay. Every man who demands a "referendum" on war is trying to overturn the constitution and effect a revolution in the face of an alert and bitter enemy. Every congressman who blathers about a limited liability war, in which we shall sink a submarine or two and then quit and come home is urging a course which will insure the isolation, humiliation and defeat of the United States when the present conflict is over. It is time to face facts, to recognize that imperial bandits cannot be stopped by writs or injunction, that it takes two to keep the peace while one can force a fight any time, and that dissension and blatant pacifism in a peaceful minded country make it an easy prey of autocratic states which tolerate no dissension and which crush out pacifism at home while encouraging it abroad. It is time to close ranks and keep step, not to dream of a flabby millennium.

STATE PRESS

Homestead Enterprise.

Occasionally a former old-time resident, who knew the site long before the city was dreamed of, comes back to Miami on a visit, and great is his surprise as he views the town as it now is. Many of the pioneer settlers hereabouts got tired of waiting for the development of this section and moved elsewhere. What is now hindsight with us should not be confused with foresight by them. Anybody can see a thing after it happens—if he is willing to look. It took lots of grit in those early days to hold on—and wait. The prospects were dubious to say the least. Many similar enterprises had been started elsewhere in the state only to meet with more or less ignominous failure. In those pioneer days Miami seemed a long way off to the inhabitants of north Florida, while to the northern traveler it offered little attractions, because of its isolation and lack of modern conveniences. To the casual observer it seemed as if Miami would have to wait until the rest of the state had become thickly populated before it could hope for material advancement. Think of the places to the north of us—Palm Beach, Daytona and St. Augustine. How could Miami hope to win tourists in the face of this trinity of attractions, each of which has the advantage of location, prestige and wealth. It does seem remarkable, when all the facts are considered, that Miami made its great record with all these and many other Florida resorts bidding against her for the tourist traffic. As a matter of fact Miami has not had to place her main reliance on the tourist business, valuable as it is, but has had her crops, citrus fruits and fisheries to round out her business assets to their present satisfying proportions. Yes, Miami has made a great record in the past and all indications warrant the belief that the record of the next ten years will show an even greater development than has been made in the past decade.

Milwaukee suburbs object to being annexed to that city.

RIFFS OF STATE OLD A CONVENTION ABOUT LEGISLATION

acksonville, March 6.—Sheriff W. Dowling of Duval county, chair- n of the entertainment committee, s made all arrangements for the nual meeting of the Florida state eriffs' association, which convenes re tomorrow in the rooms of the cksonville Chamber of Commerce. is understood that the principal matters which will be called up will be with respect to legislation which will be proposed at the approaching meeting of the state legislature in Tallahassee.

It is believed the meeting will be by far the most important ever held by the organization. Secretary J. P. S. Houston, sheriff of Leon county, has sent out the following letter with reference to the meeting, to all sheriffs in Florida.

"Each of us sheriffs desire that you be present with us in this organization. The meeting will be held in the chamber of commerce auditorium at 10 a. m. March 7, and a review of the work of the association since its organization and inception will demonstrate very clearly what benefits have been derived from the association.

"Aside from material and financial benefits the association has been a great aid to sheriffs in that through it the sheriffs of this state have come to know each other and each has been aided by some suggestion or plan devised by the others of which he probably would not have heard had it not been for the meeting of this association. Not the least of the benefits to be derived from this association is the pull together spirit which inevitably follows after a meeting of brother officers in friendly and social intercourse."

MORE JOIN IN THE HUNT FOR KING'S PARTY

Brother of Young Catlow Starts Away Into the Everglades With A Guide

SITUATION DESPERATE

Visitors To Miami Interested and Tender Their Services If Should Be Needed

Grave anxiety is felt by the families of John W. King and W. R. Catlow, Jr., because of the continued absence in the Everglades of Mr. King, his young son, John W. King, Jr, and W. R. Catlow, Jr., who left Miami on February 10th on a surveying expedition to the northwestern part of Monroe county, expecting to return not later than February 24th.

The desolate nature of the country through which they were to pass on their way to and from the section of the Everglades to which they were going, and the sticky soil through which they must pass, in the event that the water was so low their glade boat could not be used, is the principal cause for this anxiety on the part of relatives and friends.

It is known that the water in the Everglades west of Miami is considerably lower than at any time for the past fifteen or eighteen years, if not lower than the Everglades have ever been at any time. This condition is due partly to the drouth of the past several months, but principally to the state's drainage operations, and in part to the dredging of a canal for the Tamiami Trail, for while this canal has as yet no outlet it has caused the water to recede in one part of the Everglades and become higher in another.

Theory of Trappers

Experienced trappers believe that the King party have been forced, because of the low water to abandon their boat, and are trying to reach the coast on foot, through the mud and sawgrass which covers the entire Everglades. As the peninsula is about one hundred miles across, from Miami to the west coast, and nearly every mile is low, submerged land, it is easily seen that even if no accident has befallen the surveying party they are laboring under immense difficulties in trying to extricate themselves from their predicament.

It is said by those who have hunted in the Everglades in boats and have tried to travel short distances on foot, that there are many places where one could at best travel a distance of only a few hundred yards in a day.

Several parties are being formed to aid in the search for the missing party, and will work their way west from various points along the eastern rim of the Everglades.

More Searching Parties

Sunday one party under the leadership of Engineer Hallowes started southwest from the camp of the road gang on the Tamiami Trail, having a Seminole Indian as their guide.

Yesterday Theodore Junkin, half brother to young Catlow, started from a point west of Long Key, some distance from Homestead, and will, proceed in a westerly direction. Mr. Junkin has been employed in the operation of a passenger boat from West Palm Beach to Moore Haven, and is familiar with the Everglades. He is accompanied by a well known guide named Osteen.

S. E. Livingston of Homestead is organizing a party to leave Homestead today and proceed northwest from that town. One of the Dorn brothers of Larkins, and several neighbors will enter the Everglades near Larkins to travel in a westernly direction for three days, before returning.

Another party composed of L. D. Franklin of Ft. Lauderdale, and Chas. Pfeiffer, will go out from the end of the Tamiami Trail roadbed and proceed along the line of the proposed Trail toward Lee county.

Yesterday Captain J. F. Jaudon, at whose behest Mr. King and the two boys went into the Everglades, attempted to get in touch with Bob Watson and Argyle Henry, who have been on a hunting trip in the same general locality toward which Mr. King was proceeding. Captain Jaudon thought he might be able to reach Mr. Watson at Everglade water tank, forty-two miles south of Miami, by the railway telephone, and induce Mr. Watson and Mr. Henry to turn back toward the west coast and enter Shark river, Lostman's river or Harney river and make a search. Mr. Henry is one of the most experienced of Everglade guides.

Late yesterday afternoon Captain Jaudon went out to the Tamiami Trail camp in the hope that the laborers there or the engineers with the dredges might have obtained information, but they had seen or heard nothing that would throw light on the whereabouts of the King party.

Visitors Interested

Many wealthy and influential visitors in Miami, including a number of women guests at the Royal Palm hotel, have authorized The Herald to state that they will render financial aid if such is needed in forming scouting parties.

Professor David Todd, an eminent astronomer, of Amherst college, is one who has interested himself in the welfare of the surveyors. He has conferred with others visiting in Miami, and said last night that he and they will willingly do whatever they can do to be of service. Professor Todd declared that Glenn H. Curtiss will also co-operate in any way that he can, and make a fight over the Everglades the first moment the clouds lift sufficiently to permit it.

Detailed Plan of Search.

Plans for the rescue of the King party completed yesterday and related late last night by Captain Jaudon provided for the sending of six parties from the east coast and one from the west coast, and working toward the point for which Mr. King and the two boys were known to be traveling.

These scouting parties include one composed of Ed Brooker of Homestead, Cecil Miller and J. D. Folly, who will start from Homestead this morning and pursue a general northwesterly direction toward the northern part of Monroe county.

Another party composed of Theodore Junkin, Mr. Osteen and a third man, are working northwest from Long Prarie, a third consisting of Harvey Scott and another man will leave the Larkins vicinity this morning and make their way almost due west.

The party which left Miami, Sunday composed of Engineer Hallowes, Jesse Richardson and Jack Tigertail, a Seminole chief, and moving southwest from the point of the Tamiami Trail where the dredges are at work.

L. D. Franklin, an experienced glade man from Ft. Lauderdale and Charles Pfeiffer of the Biscayne Engineering Company, will go straight west over the Tamiami Trail survey to the Lee county line and then turn south to meet the other parties in Monroe county.

If Argyle Henry and Robert O. Watson can be found, they will be asked to go around to the west coast in their launches and work their way up Lostmans river, or Shark or Harney river to the point for which all the parties are moving.

From the west Mr. Jenkins of Lee county with others will move toward the place of meeting for all parties, if Mr. Jenkins carries out suggestions advanced by telegram by J. B. McCary, head of the engineering corporation having the Tamiami Trail contract.

All of the men composing the searching parties have volunteered their services. They will burn the grass as they go, so that each party will be informed by the smoke of the whereabouts of each other party.

CONFER TODAY OVER DETAILS OF CAUSEWAY

Meeting This Afternoon Between City Council and Board County Commissioners

The board of county commissioners and members of the city council will hold a joint discussion on the causeway proposition beginning at 2 p. m. today. This meeting was suggested at last Monday night's meeting of council, when a communication from the North Miami Improvement association was read at the council meeting.

In the communication the Northenders complained of the approach to the causeway from the west and desired that this be changed so as to afford a wider entrance, and suggested that the roadway be changed from Rickmer street, which is only thirty-seven and one-half feet wide, to Bay street, which is much wider. There were a number of other matters brought to the attention of the city which will be discussed at today's meeting.

The county commissioners yesterday failed to agree upon the bond which was produced by County Attorney McCaskill with regard to the Causeway litigation.

The members failed to see why the county should bind itself in the sum of $20,000 jointly with the Bowers Southern Dredging company to protect J. W. Ives and E. P. Maule from loss in the event of their winning the injunction suit to prevent going ahead with the causeway embankment construction.

The commissioners did not vote the proposition down, although they expressed dissatisfaction over it, but left it open for consideration over night.

Attorney McCaskill explained that this was necessary in order to secure the supersedeas writ from the circuit court. He said that the bond had been sent to Mr. Clark, of the Bowers Southern Dredging company, who is now in Cuba, and it would be returned with his signature this week. Mr. Clark is now in Havana.

Until the bond is signed the work upon the causeway embankment cannot be begun and should a decision not be reached by the county commissioners and the dredging company, the matter will be held up. The commissioners expressed an opinion that the dredging company should give the county a guarantee that no loss shall be sustained by the board in the event of the Maule side winning the suit. In such an event County Attorney McCaskill said that the county and the dredging company will not be involved more than $10,000, and that the dredging company had verbally agreed that in such an event they alone would be affected.

Damage By a Road

The board of county commissioners will visit the J. T. Hutton place west of Ojus this week to ascertain, if possible, the amount of damage done Mr. Hutto by a change in one of the roads there.

Mr. Hutto presented a communication to the board yesterday suggesting that he be reimbursed to the extent of $500, on account of damages done him in the premises. He was represented by Attorney Robert Seymour.

In his communication, Mr. Hutto said that he had leased the property from Palm Beach county. He maintained that the matter was illegal inasmuch as the commissioners failed to advertise for a period of thirty days which would have given him and other property owners an opportunity of being heard. Commissioner Burr explained that the change was made in the road's course in order to avoid two dangerous curves.

South Fork Bridge

The board yesterday authorized the Luten Bridge Company to go ahead with the construction of the bridge over the south fork of the Miami river.

Commissioner Lee called attention of the board to the proposition of the residents of the vicinity of Black Creek, who agreed to make a fill at the proposed bridge site there, providing the county would furnish the dynamite. They agreed to furnish the teams free of charge and do the work and wait for their pay until the next year's budget is prepared, and the pay could be included in this. The work will begin shortly.

"Underground" Wires

Causeway Engineers Klyce and Kackley wrote a letter to the board in which they said that the Western Union Telegraph and the Miami Telephone wire could be placed underneath the causeway, thereby avoiding overhead wires. The engineers said, however, that the electric light wires would have to be placed overhead, and suggested erecting posts for this purpose. The engineers suggested that the expense for this work could be covered by renting the wires to the traction and lighting company as well as the telephone and telegraph companies. They estimated the cost for the construction at $2,923.25. This could be covered by charging the lighting company $350 per year, the traction company $235 per year and a similar amount to the telephone company.

SCHOOL BOARD BUSY SESSION

Sale of Long View School Building To Be Used As A Club House

The county school board, which met in regular monthly session in the rooms of the board of education in the court house yesterday, sold the old abandoned Long View school building property to the Long View Woman's Club for a consideration of $25.

The building and ground which consists of a small piece of land, was sold with the proviso that should the place cease to be used as a woman's club it shall revert to the county school board.

Long View school is located just southwest of Homestead and has not been used since the schools in that section of the county were consolidated.

The school board received a report from Mrs. Cora Bain, the county school attendance officer, that the teachers are complaining that children who are spending the winter in the county with their parents are irregular in attendance. The county superintendent was instructed to write to these parents and inform them that in the event that their children are absent from school from any other cause than sickness, their places in the schools will be taken by those scholars who are crowded out on account of the limited facilities. Members of the school board report, however, that an investigation made by them revealed the fact that there were few tourist children in the public schools and that the majority of pupils are regular residents of the county.

The Daughters of the American Revolution were given the use of the grammar school auditorium for March 13 when Madame Pavlowa will give a performance.

WANT BETTER BUILDING FOR CITY HALL

North Miami Not In Favor of $50,000 Item In Proposed Bond Issue

STAND PAT ON OTHERS

Question Threshed Out At the Regular Meeting Held Last Night

Believing that the sum of $50,000 is not sufficient for a city hall for Miami, the North Miami Improvement Association went on record as opposing that particular item in the proposed city bond election which is set for a week from next Tuesday

All of the other items were endorsed by the association unanimously at last night's meeting after City Auditor C. H. Reeder explained the various matters separately.

The meeting of Northenders, which was given over almost entirely to the city auditor's talk on financial matters, was largely attended and much interest was manifested in the proceedings. Mr. Reeder took each item wherein the question was asked whether bonds shall be issued and explained it separately.

Various questions were asked the city official and these were answered.

Mr. Reeder told some other interesting facts, concerning the city finances. One of these was that Miami is run at less expense than many other cities of its size in the country.

In a number of events wherein the estmated revenue was made from certain sources, Mr. Reeder said that these ran above the estimate given. As an illustration the estimated income for automobile and business licenses is $23,000, but up to February 1 last the receipts from these sources were $27,430, which is more than $3,000 above the amount calulated upon by the city. The fine and forfeiture fund was estimated at $15,000 but up to February 1 the amount taken in was $17,201.55.

Mr. Reeder also told of the uncollected personal taxes and said that the city attorney is at work upon a plan to compel every person to pay his share into the city. The realty taxes have all been collected, he said.

The meeting of the association closed with an address by L. C. Mount, who told of the Miami Naval Militia, which was heartily endorsed by the association. Mr. Mount said that one complete unit has been formed and that a second one is being recruited with large number of enlistments. Each unit, he said, is to be recruited up to sixty men.

SERVICES OF THE BAND.

The directors of the Chamber of Commerce Monday night decided to retain the services of the Royal Scotch Highlanders band for one week more than provided in the original contract.

The Highlanders came to Miami under agreement to play an engagement of nine weeks.

LECTURE FOR FREE CLINIC AND NURSERY

Delivered By Dr. Samuel Wesley Smith In the Central School Auditorium

THE LIFE OF STANLEY

An Eloquent Resume of Achievements From the Workhouse To Parliament

Dr Samuel Wesley Smith, of New York City, told interestingly of the life and achievements of Hon. Henry M. Stanley, last night, while lecturing at the Central school auditorium under the auspices of the Woman's Relief association for the benefit of a free clinic and day nursery in Miami. In part he said:

"In drawing my lecture to a close, I wish to give emphasis to certain conclusions which can be derived from what I have already said.

"Let us compare Stanley with all the travelers and explorers who made Africa the field of their operations; the result will be that he towers above them all, not only as a discoverer and explorer, but as a political organizer and a missionary.

"During his long public career, under the most trying and exciting circumstances, it is impossible to cite a single reprehensible act in his public or private life.

"We can attempt with profit to imitate his example without, however, the hope of emulating him. Such men as he are epoch men, rare in the history of the human race.

"In depicting a life so crowded with incidents and so replete with great events, as that of Sir Henry Morton Stanley, our picture at best is necessarily imperfect. So many scenes of importance crowd to the front in our perspective that the outline presented to view may lack that harmony and completeness requisite for a finished product. But to do this within the narrow limits of a short lecture, is manifestly impossible of attainment, and I did not even attempt it. My design, primarily, was to so describe a great life that it would be interesting to all, and form an attractive object lesson inviting imitation and emulation on the part of the young. If I have specially emphasized Stanley's trust and dependence upon God, his consciousness of the Divine presence in his life, serving him in the hour of temptation and danger, I have done so designedly. No great work was ever accomplished but by men of positive convictions. A creed of negation is largely barren of achievement and such a belief as Stanley had, not only is a reward of success, but is a comfort and a joy, even amidst reverses.

"We see how a life embittered by misery and oppression, during its earlier period, became a conspicuous success by the practice of those virtues which lead to prosperity, and to the only real happiness obtainable in life. Furthermore, he used those ample endowments bestowed upon him naturally to the best possible advantage. He was prompt to obey the commands of right and duty, and no difficulty, no danger, could swerve him from the path he had outlined, as being the proper one to pursue. That he who was reared and educated in a workhouse should dine with kings and control provinces was, indeed, surprising, but it was not less so, that the recipient of all these honors was the same resolute, honest, unassuming man he had been before. Success did not spoil him and reverses could not long depress him.

"Whilst all of us can find much in the life of this illustrious man to emulate, I have especially dwelt upon the potency of his example to the young. He stands out pre-eminently as one who has achieved and immortalized his name in the history of great empires and nations. To achieve means to fill out the full God-given purpose of life, for human achievement gives the answer to the ever-recurring question of each generation as to the 'Why' of creation.

"We no sooner have all but wept at the sad and thrilling story of his very early years, than our minds spring forward to his closing ones, when victory has crowned his devoted and determined efforts.

"Unquestionably there are many of our young men of today familiar with the lives of men who have made history, who can readily see how they might, under the same conditions and circumstances, achieve, but feel unutterably impotent in their own immediate circumstances, and surrounded with conditions so dissimilar.

"Fatherless from earliest recollections; worse than motherless; turned over by hard-hearted relatives, who make us blush for the commonest boast of humanity, to the tender mercies of the poor house, where his lot was ill-treatment, his food what was barely necessary to keep soul and body united and dressed in the charity garb which, in those days, was regarded as second only in disgrace to the broad arrowed uniform of the convict—this 'nobody's child and nobody's care' rose above every distressing circumstance to the very pinacle of illustrious fame. Even the fabled Phoenix that arose from its own ashes seems scarcely more wonderful than this history of the workhouse boy becoming the friend of crowned heads, sought out by society, courted by statesmen.

"What was the secret of it all? That is the question I want you to face, because in the answer you will find the solution of your own difficulties those which beset you on the road to achievement.

"First, this simple but all-important fact: Stanley was not one who sat down to brood or merely to dream of what his life might become in a different setting, or to bemoan his lack of opportunities, or to call out of his misery at what seemed to be the irony of providence. No; he met the facts as they were—he faced the realities and with undaunted heart and purpose he would make the opportunities, and bent himself with all his energies to change the setting rather than submit to being the creature of environment. In other words, he has shown the potentialities in human nature and effort which enable every member of the great human family to rise above both the influences of heredity and environment, which many are pleased to term today compelling forces.

"In the second place, his ultimate success was contributed to by his fortitude. It is pathetic reading when we turn to his autobiography and read of the little lad lashed by the brutal master till his body was drenched with blood; but in the endurance which the child manifested under pain and tyranny, we see the secret of the man's strength. The brave boy was the father of the brave man, and the moral and physical courage which sustained, first the child, and then the youth, battling with the tyrannies, brutalities and hardships of the seaman's life, were responsible for the hero of the forced marches through African jungles and lands where he looked death in the face many times. Fortitude, that given the purpose, carried the man in a straight path to his goal—the relief and finding of Dr. Livingstone, or the accomplishment of some other end for which he was commissioned. Having put his hand to the plow, Stanley looked not back.

achievement was his spirit of venture—the essential possession of all who would go beyond the dull, cheerless bounds of mediocrity. For, like a silver thread, we have seen how the spirit to dare runs through his life—from the dash into the world when he escaped from the poorhouse, to the countless perils he unflinchingly encountered in his expeditions which effectually placed the laurel leaf upon the victor's brow.

"There are few young men today who, without guarantee of stipend and support, would venture, as Stanley did, on the promise of the Herald to pay only for what he wrote that was up to the standard, and exclusive. And yet it was the taking of that venture, the willingness to dare, that opened the door to the great activities and conquests of Stanley. Vision without venture is a hopeless vision, and it is well worth dwelling upon, that there never has been a man of achievement yet who has been lacking in the will to do and dare—for a glorious end, to run an untold risk of failure.

"But, underlying these virtues of which I have spoken as explaining the secret of Stanley's great, victorious life, was what at once proved the foundation, as well as the generator of his fortitude, venture and determined purpose. That is to say, Stanley knew the force and might of religion. And that means so much! Religion was so understood by him as to be something far greater than the mere sectarian spirit, or the reciting of a creed which embodied all that his intellect gave assent to, or simply an insurance against disaster in the next world, it meant present power, present development of the immortal man in his service of God and humanity.

"You will remember how he tells us of his early consciousness of the presence of God and the feeling of the infinite directing and ruling him. And the lasting benefit that came out of his knowledge of the Bible, gained in the workhouse; whilst the first start in the life of freedom was directly due to the fact that he treasured the gift of the Bishop of St. Asaph and carried with him, through his early perils, the great book of books.

"If the young men of today could be brought to learn the present living force and power of prayer, and the cultivation of a sense of the divine presence, there would be more Stanleys—successes that would live, in the good that had been brought to humanity and which history gratefully recorded. I urge this thought upon you all that, like the hero we have been thinking about, you too may 'seek and . . . find.'

"Those are the elements then, that make up the secret of Stanley's victory over the world, the flesh and the devil, which sustained him in every difficulty, and marked him out for all time as a manly man, a type of humanity's best, whom we would do well to emulate.

"There is no royal road to the goal of achievement, it is contact with difficulties and causes development, overcoming obstacles that gives strength. Stanley, the triumphant, was no less Stanley the sufferer.

"Stanley had much in common with St. Paul the devoted apostle to the Gentiles, both as to disposition and character, with experiences in his journey through life remarkably similar. Both were tenacious of purpose, inflexible in devotion to duty, and unwearied and assiduous in its performance. It is but little surprising that his wife, Lady Stanley, in retrospect of the life that was dear to her above all others, should find in the words of St. Paul much that covered a description of the life of her husband.

"'In journeying often in perils of water, in perils of robbers, in perils by mine own countrymen, in perils by the heathen, in perils in the city, in perils in the wilderness, in perils in the sea, in perils among false brethren; in weariness and painfulness, in watchings often, in hunger and thirst, in fastings often, in cold and nakedness.'

"May I wish for you all the spirit of a Stanley—the spirit that dares, that laughs at danger, courageously faces death, that shrinks not from the scourge in the hands of wicked men, that scorns the life of self and reckons success in the light of eternity, so that at the last it may cry, triumphant in the knowledge of its glorious immortality: 'I have fought a good fight, I have finished my course, I have kept the faith.'

"Fifty years hence when truth gets a hearing the muse of history will put Barth, Rolfs, Du Chaillu Teleki and Thomson for the scientific explorers of Africa; Speake, Grant, Burton and Cameron as her adventurous explorers; Gordon, Rhodes, Samuel Baker and Johnston as her soldiers, statesmen and organizers; Moffat and Livingstone as her missionary explorers; then dipping her pen in the sunlight, will write in the clear blue sky above them all the name of the soldier, geographer, diplomat, missionary and martyr, Henry Morton Stanley."

AMUSEMENTS

"Vanity" with Emmy Wehlen as Star Has a Strong Lesson.

A great moral lesson is taught in "Vanity," the new Popular Plays and Players production starring the exquisite little European actress, Emmy Wehlen, and released on the Metro program. This stirring five-act feature photodrama will be at the Paramount theatre today.

"Vanity," which is from the pen of one of America's greatest dramatic writers, Aaron Hoffman, shows the folly of a girl's allowing her imagination to run riot on the subject of beautiful clothes.

Phyllis is employed as a model at Martel's, where her duties are to try on beautiful gowns to display to fashionable customers. She becomes dissatisfied with her own cheap garments and her poor lodgings. Wanting more money with which to buy clothes and also to befriend an unfortunate girl friend, she tries to obtain it by gambling. When she loses, the chief of detectives, who has had her under scrutiny, manages to have her discharged, and forces her to assist him in securing a confession from a young man whom he believes guilty of murder.

Although the man has not committed the murder, Phyllis secures from him a damaging admission, and he is arrested. It is then that Phyllis discovers that she loves him, and she moves heaven and earth to establish his innocence. How she secures his freedom and wins back his respect and affection is told in the concluding scenes of one of the most powerful and intensely dramatic photodramas ever written.

Today At The Fotosho.

The fifth chapter of "The Purple Mask," which failed to come in last Wednesday, will be shown today at the Fotosho. In addition to this feature there will be shown a Beatrice Fairfax feature and a funny Fox comedy with Hank Mann.

RECOVERY FROM THE FREEZE

Eustis, March 6.—That the recent freeze will soon be forgotten in Eustis section is becoming more apparent every day. The dead leaves are being pushed off by the new ones and since the rain of two days ago, the change in the appearance of the groves is something wonderful. The orange blossoms are beginning to show and in another week many of the groves will be in full bloom. Many good solid oranges and grapefruit still remain on the trees. The vegetables are also recovering fast and during the past two weeks farmers have been planting potatoes and the high prices of all farm commodities will be a great stimulus for increasing the crops of potatoes, onions, lettuce, celery, etc. The farmers have already planted larger crops of these vegetables than ever before. The healthy condition of the groves in this section is attributed to the protection of the lakes.

LOOK AT CHILD'S TONGUE IF SICK, CROSS, FEVERISH

When constipated or bilious give "California Syrup of Figs."

Look at the tongue, mother! If coated, it is a sure sign that your little one's stomach, liver and bowels need a gentle, thorough cleansing at once.

When peevish, cross, listless, pale, doesn't sleep, doesn't eat or act naturally, or is feverish, stomach sour, breath bad; has stomach-ache, sore throat, diarrhoea, full of cold, give a teaspoonful of "California Syrup of Figs," and in a few hours all the foul, constipated waste, undigested food and sour bile gently moves out of its little bowels without griping, and you have a well, playful child again.

You needn't coax sick children to take this harmless "fruit laxative;" they love its delicious taste, and it always makes them feel splendid.

Ask your druggist for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," which has directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups plainly on the bottle. Beware of counterfeits sold here. To be sure you get the genuine, ask to see that it is made by "California Fig Syrup Company." Refuse any other kind with contempt.

TWO FIRE ALARMS AND SLIGHT DAMAGE

Two alarms of fire, which came in quick succession, caused much confusion about the busy section of the city early last night.

An alarm from box 45, at Avenue D and Fifteenth street, at 6:25 o'clock, called the department to the Dade Grocery company's place of business in the Henderson building, where a box of excelsior surrounding some lamp chimneys was found to be on fire. The blaze, which is thought to have been caused by spontaneous combustion, was extinguished by firemen with chemicals. The loss was estimated at $10.

While the firemen were at this blaze, an alarm came in from box 113 at Avenue D and Waddell street, which was found to be a false report, as no fire could be found. An investigation by firemen revealed the fact that the report was caused by a little boy who had a lamp in a shed at Houser street and Avenue C, and thinking that the place was on fire, someone telephoned in an alarm.

In the Meantime Growers Are Shipping Irish Potatoes To All Markets

The following items of interest are from the current issue of the Moore Haven Times, and will be of interest to Miamians, the one being evidence of the approximity of the railroad grades to the new city, the other giving an idea of the wonderful success that Messrs. Hovey and Southard are having in their first crop of potatoes, and showing the exceptional fertility of the soil inasmuch as they are replanting immediately another crop of potatoes:

"Messrs. Hovey and Southard are busy shipping Irish potatoes from their big 190 acre patch on the Osceola which has a carrying capacity of four car loads each trip.

"Only a part of the tract is ready for digging just now and in a few weeks more of the crop will be harvested. As soon as one crop is out of the ground another is put in.

"B. H. Whidden with a good gang of men arrived in Moore Haven last Saturday and on Monday the men began clearing the right of way so that it will be in readiness for the graders and track layers who will be along in a few months. Mr. Whidden has his tents pitched close to the ranch of the DeSoto Stock Farms company.

"The above item of news should set at rest the wails of the doubters who have declared time and again that the Atlantic Coast Line Railway would never extend their line to Moore Haven.

"The graders are but a few miles away and trains will be running into this town by August 15th."

GIFT TO ST. AUGUSTINE.

St. Augustine, March 6.—All of the sewers of the Flagler interests have been deeded to the city by Mrs. Mary Lily Flagler Bingham and the trustees of the late H. M. Flagler's estate. Many miles of sewers, covering a score of streets, are conveyed in the deed. The only exceptions to the great system of sewers laid by the late Mr. Flagler are those of the Hotel Ponce de Leon and Hotel Alcazar. The entire western section of the city is served by the sewers deeded to the city and the gift is one of immense value to St. Augustine.

LOST THEIR MONEY AND NEGRO WOMEN HELD FOR TRIALS

Two white men have been robbed by negro women within the past few days and the accused are locked up by the police to await a hearing before Municipal Judge Blanton today.

While reports of the robberies were made to the police, no one about police headquarters were able to give the names of the men who were robbed.

That one of the negro women had an accomplice is the belief of the police, who have taken Mose Bennett into custody in connection with the theft of $150 from a white man on Monday. Policeman Pinder has also arrested Bertha Williams, a colored woman, in connection with the alleged theft.

Alice Williams, another negress, was arrested by Policeman Hart yesterday. She is accused of securing $19 from a white man Sunday night.

Bothr of the above thefts occurred on Seventh street between the railroad tracks and Avenue G, which is the same location of other similar thefts.

Others Arrested

Other arrests by the police yesterday follow:

J. W. Crossley and L. F. Carr, violating speed ordinance, arrested by Motorcycle Policeman Ed McDade; Ed Jordan, colored, disorderly conduct, arrested by Policeman Pinder; Chas. Kelly, drunkenness, arrested by Policeman King; —— Stevens, drunk and disorderly, arrested by Policeman Cochran, and C. D. Leffer, charged with passing a street car in his automobile while the street car was unloading passengers. He was arrested by Policeman Lund.

INJURED BY AN AUTO

At noon yesterday James Dodge, a first grade pupil of Central Grammar school, was injured by an automobile near the school building, the machine being driven by Mrs. A. E. Lewis. The boy, seven years old, was rushed to the city hospital where an examination disclosed the fact that no bones were broken. Just how seriously he is injured the physicians could not say. Parents of the child reside at 615 Fifteenth street.

CLOSE CALL FOR A FAMILY ON HOUSEBOAT

Spectacular Scene When the Hope Went Up In Flames Last Night

LAMP IN A BEDROOM

Was Cause of Conflagration Which Resulted In Loss of Over $2,250

Four lives were almost snuffed out in a spectacular fire that destroyed the houseboat Hope, which was lying at anchor in the bay opposite the Florida East Coast railway terminal dock, early last night.

The boat, which was owned and occupied by Captain Lee Wright, his wife and two small children, was completely destroyed and Mr. and Mrs. Wright had much difficulty in saving themselves and their daughters, Marie, age five years, and Dorothy, who is two years of age.

The couple lost all of their belongings, which included the furnishings in the boat and all of their personal effects, clothing, etc. Mr. Wright last night estimated that his loss will be fully $2,250. This includes the houseboat.

Oil Lamp in Bedroom.

The fire was caused by an oil lamp that caught fire in one of the bedrooms in which was one of the children. The flames spread so rapidly that all efforts of the owner of the boat to extinguish them were futile and he and the others escaped from the burning vessel in a small boat that was tied along the edge of the vessel.

Captain Wright only moved his family on board the boat yesterday and was preparing to leave for Lake Okeechobee today. The houseboat had been rented to a visitor all during the season and was only vacated on Monday, and the owner and his family decided to move in.

The Hope was built by Captain Wright about two years ago and was occupied by him until the beginning of the season when it was leased to a visitor for a term of three months.

When the Wrights escaped in their small rowboat they were taken on board the tug Vulcan by Captains Drady and Russell, who made it as comfortable as possible for them until they were taken to the home of a relative late last night.

Afloat and Ablaze.

The fire was a spectacular one and drew several thousand people to the Terminal dock. Much excitement prevailed when the fire burned the cable and the vessel, which was ablaze, was blown up against the Terminal dock by a strong northeast wind and came very near setting fire to some of the yachts and schooners that were tied up at the pier.

The tug Vulcan, which was lying at the dock with steam up, rammed the burning boat and prevented it from coming in contact with the fine yacht Cynthiana which belongs to Mr. Mills, of the New York yacht club. Alongside the Cynthiana was the yacht Tarantula, which belongs to William K. Vanderbilt, Jr., while on the other end of the dock were the schooners Admiral, Hattie E. Darling and other vessels from the Bahamas.

Department Called Out.

An alarm was sent in and the fire department responded but was unable to render any assistance at the time. As the firemen were about ready to depart the cable broke and the burning yacht came into the dock with much force causing alarm among the owners of the yachts and schooners there. The firemen then set to work and spread their hose and began to fight the flames and protect adjoining property.

The most unfortunate feature about the entire affair is that the insurance on the houseboat expired a few days ago, according to Captain Wright.

In telling of their narrow escape, last night, Captain Wright said that when he discovered the fire in a bedroom where the children slept he seized the youngest child and, placing it in the mother's arms, told her to run around on the outside while he went to procure a fire extinguisher. He made an effort to use this but the heavy wind scattered the flames and pretty soon the entire inside of the boat was in flames.

As the captain went to make another effort to fight the flames he heard his wife scream and surmising that something had happened to her he went to her rescue. It was well that he did so, for Mrs. Wright was cut off by flames and smoke that came from the windows and doors.

Taking his wife and children to the small boat at the side of the houseboat the captain placed them in and carried them to the dock.

The Hope was well furnished by Mr. Wright. The boat was built at a cost of about $2,000, while the furniture and other effects were estimated at several hundred dollars by the owner.

JITNEY MEN CIRCULATING A PETITION

Asking Council To Call Election On the Recently Enacted Ordinance

Drivers and owners of jitney busses in Miami yesterday began circulating about a dozen petitions for signatures of qualified voters.

The petitions are addressed to the city council and ask for an election on the new jitney bus ordinance which is drafted to become effective March 17.

The jitney men say they will secure enough signatures to the petitions to guarantee that the ordinance will not be in effect until the election is held.

One of the drivers, who is also an owner, said last night: "We either want council to repeal the ordinance or order an election and let the public say what restrictions shall be placed on us. We do not object to reasonable legislation, but the new ordinance, in our opinion, is not reasonable or to the best interest of the public."

COUNTY GETS WAITE ON THE CHARGE OF BICYCLE LARCENY

Charged with the larceny of bicycles Charles Waite, who was arrested by the police on Monday, was turned over to the county authorities by Judge Blanton in the police court yesterday.

Other cases disposed of by Judge Blanton yesterday follow: C. M. Thorp, charged with passing a street car while unloading passengers, was fined $5 or ten days; Robert Frow, colored, charged with gambling, $10 or twenty days; Hilda Grey, colored, disorderly conduct, $10 or twenty days; Ethel Cash, colored, disorderly conduct, $5 or ten days.

Those who forfeited their bonds by failing to appear in court were: Walter Waldin, traffic violation; $5; George McQuay, colored, traffic violation, $5; Joe Fryer and Will Nelson, colored, gambling, $10 each; J. J. Dorsey, drunk and asleep on street, $5.

The case of H. E. Klober, charged with violating traffic ordinance, was continued.

J. M. Bowers, charged with violating traffic ordinance, was discharged.

VOL. 7. NO. 94. MIAMI, FLORIDA, WEDNESDAY MORNING, MARCH 7, 1917. PRICE FIVE CENTS

THE ADVANTAGES OF FLORIDA FOR THE LIVESTOCK INDUSTRY

(Paper Read by Fred N. Burt of De Leon Springs Before Livestock Men's Convention)

It would seem a good business proposition to send missionaries throughout the land proclaiming the advantages of Florida for the livestock industry from the viewpoints of people who have land, merchandise or services to sell; but I am at a loss to know why your program committee elected me to explain these advantages to you "old-timers," as you know the advantages a thousand fold better than I do.

I wish to confess right here that I am only a "two-year-old" at the stock game—a mere baby, just out of its swaddling clothes, as compared with you men. It appears to border upon the ridiculous for me to stand here and tell you that in this state you have a vast free range that raises native grasses in abundance, and will furnish food for stock eight or nine months of the year; that the water supply is abundant, found everywhere, and is free; that by fencing, clearing, cultivation, fertilization and rotation on land that can be purchased at an absurdly low price, you can raise corn, Japanese cane, sorghum, kaffir corn, maize, beans, peas, Natal, Soudan, Para, Bermuda, St. Augustine and native grasses, and a thousand other things, for silage, hay and pasture for feeding during three or four months of the year. That the climate is such that it is not necessary to make any outlay whatever for buildings for the protection of cattle or hogs during any portion of the year.

In short, the conditions are such that you can raise beef and pork as cheaply as any state in the union, and at a less cost than at least 75 per cent of the United States. I will go further and hazard the "guess" that you can raise beef and pork cheaper than any state at this time.

I repeat that you men know these facts better than I do. It appears to me that the trouble with you is that you do not appreciate the advantages nature has endowed you so plentifully with. That which is plentiful and free is seldom appreciated. If through my words I can bring only one man among you to realize the advantages I shall consider my time well spent. You have all of the advantages and few disadvantages; and, the disadvantages are simply disposed of. With all the natural advantages you cannot continue indefinitely to make the livestock industry profitable by using the free range twleve months in the year, with poor, lightweight, long-horned, tick-ridden, inbred cattle, as conditions are rapidly changing. When a man goes through this state from the west and looks out of a Pullman car window and sees these poor, lightweight, tick-ridden, fever-stricken, long-horned, sorry-looking cattle, he immediately comes to the conclusion that this state cannot raise good cattle, otherwise the people would do so. When you go into the stockyards at Buffalo, St. Louis, Omaha and Denver and look at the herds coming in for sale, you will find that southern cattle bring low prices, and when you ask why they bring a low price, they tell you, "Oh, that is only southern scrub stuff. They can't raise good cattle in the south."

I believe that every man in this room who knows the cattle game at all knows that we can raise good cattle and hogs, and that we can raise them more economically than the north or west. And I repeat, that the only obstacles in the way are the tick and the failure to feed the cattle, and these obstacles can be easily surmounted if you just go to it; everything else will naturally follow. If we raise good cattle and hogs and planty of them the markets will spring up in various localities and competition will boost the prices. And as cattle are being moved the railroads will provide facilities for handling them economically and efficiently, so that the cattle may be comfortable in transit, with a minimum amount of shrinkage. In short, it's right up to you men to make good and show the world not by words, but by optical illustration, that Florida has wonderful possibilities for the livestock industry. Personally, I am frank enough to confess that I am not anxious to have an exodus of men to our state to raise cattle, as it would mean competition and the raising of costs of production, and I want the present advantages for myself for as long a period of time as possible. To sum up—

1. You enjoy all the natural advantages.
2. You have few disadvantages.
3. You must eradicate the tick.
4. You must feed three months of the year.
5. You must introduce pure-bred bulls.
6. You should educate your young men to grow feed economically and scientifically.

This program followed means prosperity and comfort for you, and happiness and contentment—the most desirable thing on God's green earth—should follow.

The plan that I have laid out for myself is to clear several thousand acres of land, fence it with a cattle-and-hog-proof fence, put up silos, raise corn, Japanese cane and peas for silage; put Natal grass on the high cut-over pine lands for hay; Soudan grass in the somewhat lower lands for hay; Para grass in the wet lands for hay, and in the sections that I do not intend to entirely clear and do not expect to ever use for other purposes, plant Bermuda grass for a permanent pasture, and I believe that permanent pastures can be made in this way, and make one acre do what many acres would do on the free range. I explained this program to Professor Rolfs last year at the cattlemen's convention at Tampa, and was extremely gratified when he told me that my program was sure of success, and that I had learned in a short time what it had taken some men twenty-five years to learn.

In regard to the stock, it is my opinion that herds should be purchased in the fall, when the young stock that have not been weaned or have been weaned for only a short time are in good condition, and immediately run this herd through the dipping tanks until the tick has been killed. Then put them on pasture or feed hay and silage during the following winter; the next spring they will be fat and in good condition, while the free range man's cattle will be thin, and that is the time to sell off the bulls, steers, stags and small cows, retaining only the young large-framed cows under fence, to keep permanently under fence and fed for stockers. By the use of thoroughbred bulls, such as Aberdeen-Angus, Shorthorn, Hereford or other good bulls, a better generation will come about, and I have been told that if this plan is followed out the sixth generation will show over 90 per cent pure bred. This program can be repeated on various herds from time to time until the maximum supporting capacity of the fenced range has been filled, and then the rancher will be in position to sell the surplus of as good beef as can be found in Chicago, Omaha, St. Louis, or any other market where they secure high prices. I believe that if this program be followed out it will not only be profitable, but it will be a great benefit to the cattle from a humanitarian standpoint. It will be a great benefit to the stockmen and their children, as it will enable them to make a profit so that they can bring their families up in comfort and educate them properly, and I would urge that the young men be given an opportunity to take advantage of a practical course in the University of Florida to fit them to raise beef and forage economically and scientifically. I expect to make mistakes, but if I do not make more than one-tenth as many mistakes as President Wilson has made I will not be entirely ruined.

As my time has not all been consumed, possibly it might interest you to know how I happened to become interested in the livestock industry, and why I selected Florida. After retiring from a manufacturing business in the north about seven years ago I traveled extensively in Europe and over this continent and in the islands of the Atlantic, not only for the pleasure of traveling, but to select a place to reside where the climate would be agreeable all the year around, and where I could live in the open, but I failed to find such a climate, and do not believe it exists, and determined that the nearest to the ideal that could be secured in the way of climate was to live in Florida nine months of the year, and in some good location in the north the other three months of the year. I drifted to Florida in an automobile as a tourist, and I have been over this state (with the exception of the extreme northwestern section) with automobile, canoe and on horseback. Hunting, fishing and idleness soon palled upon me and I purchased a small block of land in Volusia county to "play" with, but as I had always led an active life I soon became interested in making it a business proposition, and it quickly dawned upon me that the raising of beef and pork had the best possibilities and would be the safest investment. Knowing absolutely nothing about farming or cattle and hogs I immediately commenced the study of them, and the first question that occurred to my mind was to ascertain what portion of the United States would be the logical place to commence operations in to secure the maximum of results.

About this time I read a speech made by some fool congressman at Washington, stating that the high cost of living and the high cost of beef was due to a combination of packers composing the so-called beef trust. I was also under the impression that the great southwest of this country was the big beef-raising section; and, I also had read an article emanating from a governmental source that stated that the ranges of the west were giving out, for various reasons, and that the population of this country must look for its beef east of the Mississippi river and south of the Mason and Dixon line. In order to consider these things by personal observation I concluded to take an automobile trip from New York to California, and went west to Chicago, where I visited the stockyards; thence through Illinois, Iowa and Nebraska, where the corn grows tall and the cattle and hogs grow fat; stopped at Omaha and visited the stockyards, and became acquainted with some of the buyers and sellers of stock, and noted their methods. Then southwest through Colorado, New Mexico, Arizona, and Southeastern California, and en route kept away from the railroads as much as possible and as near the cattle ranges as I could. When I met or visited a cattle man or ranch my first question was, "Well, how is the cattle business?" and the reply almost universally was, "It is all gone to hell-up." Upon asking for the reason I was told that it was due to dry farms; to Nesters, to irrigation companies taking up the water rights, to fences, to the high cost of stockers, and other causes. I asked what they were doing about the matter, and they said that they were decreasing their herds. These replies convinced me thoroughly that the congressman who made the statement that the high cost of beef was due to the beef trust did not know what he

U. S. GOVERNMENT FINANCING

(H. I. Perrine in The Magazine of Wall Street)

Investment conditions in this country during the twelve months of 1916 and up until the latter part of January of this year were the best that have been experienced in a great many years. Not since the prosperous times of 1909 had there been such continued activity and urgent demand for practically all classes of bonds, both those issues listed on the stock exchange and those dealt in over the counter. The transactions in foreign government securities and in industrial issues were particularly heavy and many houses interested in these types of securities did more business in the first nine months of 1916 than they did in the whole of 1915, which in itself was a good year. While dealings in the above two classes accounted in great measure for much of the increased business, all bond issues shared in the improvement, and the general advance in prices since the low level of September, 1915, when the effects of heavy foreign liquidation were most severely felt, carried the more representative issues to a new high level.

Reasons for Bond Boom

The reasons underlying this upward movement are not hard to find. With the steady accumulation of investment funds by manufacturers, merchants and business men generally, arising from the prosperous conditions in this country following the war, it was natural that some channel should be sought for this surplus. Much of this money, of course, found its way into the speculative markets, but it is safe to say that by far the greater part found placement in the higher grade bond issues, where the matter of safety of principal was the controlling element. And further, it is probable that a large portion of the funds, originally used in the purchase of speculative issues, was later transferred to the more stable investments following the unsettled conditions of the stock market in the latter part of 1916. The attractive prices at which the large foreign government issues were offered to the public also undoubtedly resulted in heavy buying of these bonds on the assumption that such securities, in the event of a return to normal conditions, are likely to have a larger relative advance in price than any other type of investment, while at the same time affording reasonable safety of principal. The larger importation of gold into this country was also another important factor influencing investment demand, the banks finding it hard to employ their loanable funds profitably, and thus increasing their holdings of bonds to the highest levels ever attained.

During the past few weeks transactions in bonds have been considerably reduced and the investment business has been more restricted than at any time since last mid-summer. A tendency to lower prices has developed and a disinclination on the part of the public to purchase even the higher grade issues has been noticeable. A lessening of the investment demand is not unusual at this time of the year, following the heavy placement of funds in January and the conditions are due, of course, to the uncertainties connected with the present international situation. Relations with Germany have been severed, the German ambassador has departed, foreign trade has been partially blockaded and further serious complications are likely to arise from time to time. Under these circumstances it is not to be wondered at that investors are inclined to defer purchasing until some of these uncertainties are eliminated. In fact, when the possibilities of the prtsent situation are analyzed, it seems remarkable that bond prices have held up so well.

The Rush to Liquidate

One of the complications arising out of the situation, which is generally expected to have a disturbing effect upon investment conditions in this country, is the probable issue by this country of a large government loan. It is thought that such an issue coming at a time when so many foreign governments are looking to this market for their supply of capital, would result in a substantial increase in money rates with a corresponding decline in bond prices. Hence the rush to liquidate securities of all classes following the announcement of the break with Germany, resulting in a decline of from 1 to 3 points in the general bond market, and the disposition of investors to hold off until the new government bonds have been offered for sale, resulting in the comparative inactivity in the local bond business. Whether or not this view of the situation is correct, there seems little doubt but that this prospect of a huge United States government loan had more to do with the recent unsettling of investment conditions than any of the other disturbing factors. As to what effect such a flotation of bonds is likely to have upon the future trend of the bond market, depends largely upon the size of the loan, on the form it takes, upon the interest rate it is to bear, and upon the reception which it meets.

Need for Government Financing

Regardless of whether or not the United States enters the European conflict, there will have to be a government bond issue of some description to clear up the present deficit of approximately $150,000,000 and to pay for ships, guns, ammunition, etc., under the preparedness measure. The present revenue bill, now before congress, contemplates bond issues that will increase our national debt by at least three hundred million dollars. If this country becomes actively engaged in the war, its expenses of course will mount rapidly and large additional loans will have to be issued to take care of these requirements. For present purposes, however, it is thought that an issue of $300,000,000 would suffice and it is believed that a loan of this size could easily be floated at a rate as low as 3 per cent. This amount would provide sufficient funds to tide the government over until the income tax receipts become available in June, at which time additional bonds could be issued for such contingencies as might arise, at a slightly higher interest rate. In the event of future financing on a higher income basis, protection could be given to the subscriber to the initial loan through the medium of a conversion privilege, whereby the original bonds could be exchanged for those of a later issue on a more attractive basis. Such a privilege would practically insure a hearty reception for the loan on the part of the public and would serve to maintain the price of the bonds at or near their offering prices. This convertible feature has been employed to excellent advantage by Great Britain in offering her war loans and is a matter of the greatest importance where any future financing is contemplated.

Effect On Investment Market

The effect of this contemplated bond issue on the investment market is rather difficult to determine at the present time owing to the fact that there is no information available as to the kind of a loan the government will issue. Much would seem to depend upon the size of the loan and upon the interest rate which the bonds will carry. Too high an interest rate would naturally cause a sharp decline in the prices of other investment securities. Too low a rate on the other hand would not appeal to the public, and the bonds, consequently, would be apt to go too slow, particularly in the case of a large issue. In either event money rates would doubtless work temporarily higher since the borrowing would tie up a considerable amount of credit until the funds obtained were distributed. Should a 3 per cent rate be decided on, however, and a conversion privilege into future issues be given, there seems little reason to believe that the flotation of such an issue would have any permanent disturbing effect upon the general bond market. In case this country becomes involved in the war, and further government financing made necessary on a more attractive income basis, a rise in interest rates would naturally be expected. This situation would be still further aggravated should this country be forced into competition with foreign governments in financing its requirements. In this connection it is interesting to observe that many of the foreign government bonds in this market are selling at prices to yield an unusually high return, although having excellent security and attractive convertible features. It is understood that plans are under way involving further financing of foreign countries, including France, Canada and some South American republics, and it is expected that a large part of these funds will be sought in this market. The requirements of France and Canada together are said to total $200,000,000, but if the United States is seriously in need of funds, foreign financing will, of course, be given second consideration.

An Opportune Time

There has probably never been a time in the history of this country when conditions were better suited to the flotation of a large government loan. There is today more money in the United States than ever before and banking interests are prepared to make any government loan an unqualified success. Considerable interest has been given to the proposed issue, and there is little question but that even a large offering of this character could be readily absorbed within a comparatively short time. Financially the United States is prepared for any emergency, and, while the outcome of the present international situation is of course a matter of much uncertainty, it is felt that this country is strong enough to withstand any development that the future may have in store. IF BACK HURTS USE SALTS FOR KIDNEYS

Eat less meat if Kidneys feel like lead or Bladder bothers you —Meat forms uric acid.

Most folks forget that the kidneys, like the bowels, get sluggish and clogged and need a flushing occasionally, else we have backache and dull misery in the kidney region, severe headaches, rheumatic twinges, torpid liver, acid stomach, sleeplessness and all sorts of bladder disorders.

You simply must keep your kidneys active and clean, and the moment you feel an ache or pain in the kidney region, get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any good drug store here, take a tablesponful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and is harmless to flush clogged kidneys and stimulate them to normal activity. It also neutralizes the acids in the urine so it no longer irritates, thus ending bladder disorders.

Jad Salts is harmless; inexpensive; makes adelightful effervescent lithia water drink which everybody should take now and then to keep their kidneys clean, thus avoiding serious complications.

A well-known local druggist says he sells lots of Jad Salts to folks who believe in overcoming kidney trouble while it is only trouble.

THE ADVANTAGES OF FLORIDA

was talking about, and that it was entirely due to the law of supply and demand. For one reason and another the cattlemen were decreasing their herds and lessening their production, and the population was rapidly increasing and increased the demand, and when a condition of this kind is encountered it invariably results in high prices. This beneficent administration of ours who claim that they have the interests of the dear p-e-o-p-l-e at heart, kindly took the tariff off of beef with the idea that it would create competition from Australia and the Argentine Republic, and give the vicious beef trust a black eye. In going from San Diego, Cal., to New Orleans, La., just before the present war, I became acquainted with two fellow passengers who were large ranchmen in Australia, and who were en route to England for a visit, via the United States. The first question that I naturally asked them was how the cattle business was in Australia, and their reply was, "First-class now." And they emphasized the word "now" so much that it impelled me to ask what they meant by "now," and their reply was, "Since you fellows took the tariff off." I asked, "What has the tariff got to do with it?" and they said, "It's got $5 to $7 per head to do with it." I thereupon asked them to explain and they said, "It is a simple matter. When the United States government took the tariff off, American buyers came to Australia to purchase; there is only one line of steamers from America to Australia, and that is the Spreckles line, and the packers contracted for the entire carrying capacity for five years, and we saw our opportunity and raised the price $5 to $7 per head and secured it." I then said, "That means that our government has made a mistake in taking the tariff off—the consumer pays just as much for his meat, the United States government is deprived of a revenue and you people, who are foreigners, secure the velvet," and the cattlemen said, "You have stated it in a nutshell." I then said, "How about the Argentine?" and they said, "You will never get any permanent advantge from buying meat in the Argentine, as the Argentine Republic derives a considerable amount of its revenue from the beef industry, and if the exportation begins to get heavy you will see an export duty put upon it."

When I first visited Florida I thought that the possibilities for growing forage here were quite slim, but after visiting northern Texas, southern New Mexico, southern Arizona and southeastern California, I concluded that Florida was a paradise for a range as compared with those places and that is one reason why I drifted back to Florida.

SIMPLY UNANSWERABLE

Billy was about to be married, and his friends—married friends—were giving him good advice, the burden of which was "Forget it!"

But Billy was not to be dissuaded.

"Oh, I don't know," he replied. Marriage is all right if you take it in the right way. Now, all this talk about matrimonial quarrels, arguments and so on is all nonsense. Surely you can accept one another's point of view! And, anyway, there's always an answer to every argument."

"Oh, is there?" growled the old married man. "I tell you boy," theres one argument in married life that you'll never be able to answer."

"Really! And whats that?"

"Why, when your wife says: 'If the Browns can afford it, we can!' You try to find an answer to that!"

Lights from the German Trenches Like a Display of Fireworks on the Fourth of July

How the European Soldier Fights By Night As Well As By Day-Trench Raids In Darkness and By the Glare of Rockets.

Copyright, 1917, by The International Syndicate.

IT is said that "necessity is the mother of invention", and if there ever existed a necessity for devising ways and means to accomplish results that necessity exists today in the great European struggle. Not content with the implements of warfare which can be used in the daylight, or, rather realizing that the full effectiveness of these implements could not be brought out in the daytime, the ingenuity of the combatants has developed modes of destruction which require the darkness of night for their deadliest work. So, the world is today witnessing a holocaust of life and property carried on with relentless vigor and malignity for the whole twenty-four hours of the day.

Modern inventions have made night fighting possible on the battlefields of Europe for all sorts of lights are now in use to prevent surprise attacks as well as to locate and destroy the enemy. The night life along the battle lines is weirdly picturesque for there are flares and flares of rockets as far as the eye can reach. They burn with great brilliance for a time and then go out leaving the night darker than ever although the least sign of alarm will cause the battlefield to be illuminated like some vast theatre, and the hissing and sputtering of the machine guns will begin at once and men who only a few minutes before were resting in the trenches are called into action—a call which is frequently their last on earth.

Personal And Impersonal.

The difference between day and night fighting might be described as impersonal by day, and personal—even intimate, by night.

During the day the big guns of each side hurl tons of explosives over the field, but the targets of each can be seen but dimly through the gray mists of the short winter days, and neither side is sure of the havoc of their cannons. This is impersonal warfare. Night, however, changes all this, for the big guns are silent and the men engage in hand to hand combats on "no man's land" between the trenches. This is personal warfare, for there the soldier sees his adversary and knows who is the victor of the clash.

Trench Raids.

The long dark nights are ideal for what is known as "trench raids". Very little is said in the official reports of the nocturnal conflicts between the men, yet hundreds have been killed or made prisoners by this mode of warfare where the men use the most primitive methods, often pounding each other with hammers or stabbing the enemy with a dirk. This is intimate warfare. The scientists of the different warring nations seem determined that the soldier man shall not rest and have invented diabolical lighting devices which search out every living thing within a radius of five hundred yards.

The Germans have been particularly successful in the use of a peculiar flash pistol that shoots fireworks to a great height. The ingredients used consist of a cotton fuse igniting a chemical mixture and at the same time releasing a small parachute. Then slowly in serpentine ribbons the light drops earthward illuminating the enemy's trenches. All night long these rockets soar through the air under the direction of the German chemists and woe to the Frenchman or Englishman who is caught in the merciless glare which shows even a blade of grass. The darkness is streaked with fantastic shaped flames of various colors and at times the scene is not unlike one of our Fourth of July firework displays. When these lights go up from the German trenches their machine guns have been made ready for action and as a rocket will last at least forty seconds the German artilleriest can easily establish a range and almost before the men of the other side can move the pitiless rain of bullets pelts down upon them, and war takes on a new terror very different from that felt during a daylight battle and calls for genuine courage.

Friend Or Foe.

There is something hideous about this night fighting for even the shadows are a menace. In the darkness it is not easy to tell friend from foe and even the shell torn shrubs waving to and fro seem to take on forms of the enemy as their branches bend over shell craters filled with dead men. At the least sound the soldier is alert as the darkness between the rockets offers an opportunity for an enemy to slip up from behind and with a dirk silence a man before he can give an alarm.

Incendiary Bombs.

The Allies send up incendiary bombs which give an intense glow, and when one of these explodes a column of flame leaps about one hundred and fifty feet in the air and spreads a clear light over a large area. Utter blackness follows as the guns open up and send the shells crashing on their mission of destruction. Then another bomb goes up, followed by more shells.

Repair Work.

Much of the repair work is done at night and the patrols who are exposed when the rockets begin, rush to cover at once for they know that the ribbon lights are but forerunners of death. One victim who was seriously wounded while repairing a barbed wire entanglement at night and failed to reach cover in time declared that when the light from a rocket spread over him he felt as if he had been stripped of his clothing and propped against a wall for instant execution. "I am not afraid of guns in the daylight, but night on the front is an inferno that gets a man's nerve," he told the nurse in the hospital where he was sent with a shattered leg. Many nights are spent in repairing barbed wire entanglements and in mending broken telephone communications. When the men work at the latter, a sentry generally climbs a tree nearby and hides among the leaves watching the enemy's trench to ward off a surprise. The men who work on the wire entanglements lay flat on the ground in the mud or grass while the rockets are burning and then return to their work in the darkness. Frequently they are sighted and the machine guns of the enemy spit bullets among the wires. They strike with a sharp metallic ping all around the prostrate men. "It seems ages before you rise," said one man, "and when you do, you expect every minute will be your last. Sometimes a man is wounded and we have to carry him back to the trench before we finish our work."

The use of firearms after dark is forbidden lest the noise should call attention to some special operation that is being carried out under the cover of darkness. This adds to the fiendishness of the fight, for the weapons used are dirks, hammers and entrenching tools. During trench raids friend and foe sometimes become hopelessly mixed and on one occasion a Frenchman is said to have killed his own brother in one of these combats. The dreadful scene was finally lighted by the glare of a rocket as it fell over the field, and when the man saw what he had done he became a raving maniac and rushed toward the German trenches, being killed by a shell a few minutes later.

Sometimes the flares have shown strips of white tape laid forward from the German trenches. This means that a raid is to be made and the tape is laid to guide the men and prevent them from getting mixed in their bearings as the trench lines are not always straight and even in the daylight not easily discerned. During the flares the light shines with an uncanny radiance and various devices are employed by the men to keep it from showing their faces. Some use a dark grease, while others cover themselves with dark veils. These night attacks develop at a moment's notice and the men are frequently ordered out in great haste when a "listening post" has discovered a propitious moment for an attack. During the early part of the war this occurred frequently, but "listening" is more difficult just now, as many officers do not allow their men to speak above a whisper in the trenches at night.

Aircraft Active At Night.

The aircrafts of the armies are often active at night and when these appear the huge searchlights show up against the dark sky long enough for the men who work the anti-aircraft guns to get a range. Sometimes the gun is successful either in bringing down the machine or driving it away, and at others the aeroplane hovers about until the break of day getting a line on the position of the enemy. Occasionally the Zeppelin or aeroplane, as the case may be, drops a bomb as near the searchlight as possible in the hope of destroying it or at least killing its guardians.

These scenes are enacted all along the battle lines, for the Austrians and Italians play the same game whenever the ground is such that it can be worked, and death stalks forth in horrible form at night wherever the nations meet in battle array.

DIXIE HIGHWAY TRACT—To those residing permanently in Miami and to tourists here for the season, J. A. Gates & Son have a message: We have formulated a plan whereby we can greatly reduce the price of real estate to purchasers, cause the business of real estate to be more highly respected, and to be more enjoyable and satisfactory to those engaged in the traffic. We purpose to sell lots in a tract by employing hired salesmen just as a merchant sells goods in his store by clerks in his employ. Parties visiting our Dixie Highway Tract, now being offered, will be shown over the tract by our salesmen. A tag bearing the lot and block number and price of lot is attached to a stake placed in front of each lot to be detached by purchaser and presented at office of tract owner, where papers in settlement will be drawn. We can, we believe, by this method save the purchaser 25 per cent or more and complete the transaction most expeditiously and satisfactorily. We especially call attention to location of our Dixie Highway Tract. It adjoins the Charles Doering place on the north and extends from Dixie Highway to Bay View Ave., overlooking the Bay. All inside lots are held at a uniform price of $195 each, corners $300. If in this connection you note the fact that lots in Flander's tract which adjoins the Charles Deering place on the south, are held at prices ranging from about $3,000 to $5,000, and are on lower land, you will readily see that lots in Dixie Highway will certainly appreciate rapidly in value with the growth of Miami, and that you will make no mistake in buying now. Is it unreasonable to expect an advance of one hundred per cent in values within one year? May we not urge those of our home people thinking to secure a lot while cheap in price and most attractively located, to select now? May we not urge tourists seeking a place for building a winter home to visit us; and may we not especially urge builders who want to get a bunch of lots on which to build houses to sell or rent to select now while the selecting is good—the bunches are unbroken. Dixie Highway Tract has many advantages, such as electric lights, telephones, jitney busses about half hourly, ice, meat, groceries delivered daily, daily mail delivery, high school churches, literary clubs fraternities, and other advantages of a happy and cultured community. J. A. Gates & Son, 235 Twelfth street. Telephone 316.

RATS HOLD UP CATS

One Sits on Tabby, Others Awe It in Circle

Bala, Pa. — Alfred, James, of Cynwyd, believes there must have been something in that story about a convention of rats once deciding to "bell the cat." He is certain he stumbled on a rat convention that was just about ready to put the question today.

James went into his stable to feed his horse. He opened his feed box. The sight that met his eyes, he says, is one he will never forget. James has a large, fat, lazy cat. Of course the cat's name is Thomas—in this case Thomas Atkins, although Thomas is no fighter—and James saw his cat, Thomas, resting on the oats in the grain box. Seated on Thomas' back was a large rat, almost, if not quite, as large as Thomas, and surrounding Thomas was a circle of five or six other rats.

"The rats appeared to be having a good time," James said. "Thomas did not appear to be having a good time at all. Thomas seemed to be scared within an inch of his ninth life."

SHE WAS TOO NEAR

Her husband had just come home and had his first meeting with the new nurse, who was remarkably pretty.

"She is sensible and scientific, too," urged the fond mother, "and says she will allow no one to kiss baby while she is near."

"No one would want to," replied the husband, "while she is near."

And the nurse was discharged.

HIGH COST OF LIVING

In an interview with Dr. P. P. Claxton, commissioner of education in the department of the interior, he made the following statement regarding the high cost of living and a partial solution of it:

"High cost of living" is on the lips of all people in all cities, towns, suburban communities, and manufacturing and mining villages in the United States. It is discussed in the editions of every newspaper and magazine. To millions of laboring people and professional people on small salaries it is a very real thing. To hundreds of thousands with large families of children to support and educate, it has come to be a fearful thing; to many, torture and death.

"For the high cost of living there are many causes. Two of these are the unusual lack of food, and the fact that most of the food is consumed far from the place of production, which makes the consumer pay the cost of storage and transportation, and the profits of the middlemen, many of whom, in times like these, take advantage of the wants of the people to make profits larger than they should.

"Is there a remedy? There is a partial remedy at least, but not wholly in investigations or legislation. This remedy is so simple and close at hand that, as is so frequently the case, it is overlooked. In the schools of the cities, towns, suburban communities, and manufacturing and mining villages of the United States there are approximately 6,000,000 boys and girls between the ages of nine and sixteen. Most of them are idle more than half of the year. They are in school less than 1,000 hours in the year, and allowing 10 hours a day for sleep, are out of school more than 4,000 waking hours, more than an average of nine hours a day, not counting Sundays. National and state laws make it impossible for most of them to do any profitable work in mill, mine or shop, and many of them are forming habits of idleness and failing into vice. Even during the vacation months only about 10 per cent have any profitable employment; only about 5 per cent of them go away from their homes except for a few days. Still, they must live and be fed and clothed.

"For four millions of these there is access to back yards, side yards, front yards, and vacant lots, which might be cultivated as small gardens for the growth of vegetables and small fruits. Many live where space could be easily had for chickens, ducks, or pigeons. And there are not less than 6,000,000 older boys and girls and adult men and women for whom an hour or two of work each day in a garden would be the best form of recreation and rest from the routine of their daily labor in office or shop or mill or mine, and who might easily find the time for it.

"With some intelligent direction, these school children and older boys and girls and men and women might easily produce on the available land an average of $75 each in vegetables and fruits for their own tables or for sale in their immediate neighborhood; fresh and crisp through all the growing months and wholesomely canned and preserved for use in winter. This would add $750,000,000 to the best form of food supply of the country without cost of transportation or storage and without profits of middlemen. The estimate is very conservative, as has been shown by many experiments.

"In addition to the economic profits, there would be for the children health and strength, removal from temptation to vice, and education of the best type; and for older persons, rest and recreation in the open air and the joy of watching things grow.

"This might all be attained at comparatively little cost by putting into the public schools for every hundred children between the ages of nine and sixteen, one teacher skilled in gardening and paid for all the year. One such teacher could easily direct the work of 100 children, and of the 150 older persons belonging to the families of these children or living in their community. Thus 40,000 teachers of this kind would be sufficient for the entire country. These teachers might easily be had for an average additional salary of $500 or a total of $20,000,000. There would be some cost for seeds and some for fertilizers and tools, but after the first year the cost of these last two items would be comparatively little. The proceeds would represent profits to a greater extent than in any other kind of production. The miracle of it is in bringing together idle land on the one hand and idle children and tired people on the other. Alone, neither is productive, but all would be benefited by the combination even if the vegetables and fruits produced had no value; the land by the cultivation, the children by the health-giving, educational labor, and the older people by the hours outdoors and the contact with the soil."

SOUTHERN CORNBREAD

Nashville Banner: In response to Champ Clark's advice that there should be a greater use of corn as food, the epicure of the New York Sun makes this sage observation concerning cornbread:

"It was well thought of in this country as human food 50, 40, perhaps 30 years ago. But in an unfortunate day even poor folk began to neglect corn. Dressed up as hominy it still had a certain popularity, parents were willing that their children should eat it thus. Treated with baking powder, salt, plenty of rich cream and butter, it was still made into a hot bread some were not ashamed to eat."

This serves chiefly in this part of the country to show how little the south and southerners are computed as a part of the country, and how little they know in New York and other supposed enlightened centers of what constitutes good eating.

It is assuredly not necessary to use the past tense when corn as human food is spoken of in the south. Cornbread is used preferably by thousands of well-to-do people of the south, in the cities and towns, as well as in the rural sections.

We know the virtue in this region of the pone, the hot corn muffin and of "eggbread," which, if our brethren of the north ever knew, they are unfortunate to have forgotten.

Bob Taylor used to say one essential difference between the south and north is "hot biscuit and cold lightbread." The negro cooks in the south made hot bread for each meal practicable, while the thrifty housewives of the north had "baking days," when enough bread was baked for a week. That was where the difference mainly lay.

The Chicago city council finance committee has found the cost of elections to be much greater since women got the vote.

QUIT MEAT IF YOUR KIDNEYS ACT BADLY

Take tablespoonful of Salts if Back hurts or Bladder bothers—Drink lots of water

We are a nation of meat eaters and our blood is filled with uric acid, says a well-known authority, who warns us to be constantly on guard against kidney trouble.

The kidneys do their utmost to free the blood of this irritating acid, but become weak from the overwork; they get sluggish; the eliminative tissues clog and thus the waste is retained in the blood to poison the entire system.

When your kidneys ache and feel like lumps of lead, and you have stinging pains in the back or the urine is cloudy, full of sediment, or the bladder is irritable, obliging you to seek relief during the night; when you have severe headaches, nervous and dizzy spells, sleeplessness, acid stomach or rheumatism in bad weather, get from your pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast each morning and in a few days your kidneys will act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush and stimulate clogged kidneys, to neutralize the acids in urine so it is no longer a source of irritation, thus ending urinary and bladder disorders.

Jad Salts is inexpensive and cannot injure; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink, and nobody can make a mistake by taking a little occasionally to keep the kidneys clean and active.

EASY TO CONQUER AMERICA

An eventual war upon the United States was considered by the German general staff before the outbreak of the present conflict in Europe. A comprehensive scheme for the invasion and subjugation of this country had been arranged, even to the points and methods of attack.

Not long before the clash in August, 1914, Field Marshal Von Edelsheim of the Prussian general staff engaged in detailing for the German newspapaers the plans for world conquest entertained by the kaiser and his military leaders. After showing in previous papers how to invade and conquer France and England and assuming this accomplished, he wrote regarding Germany's war aims against the United States:

"Operations against the United States of North America would have to be conducted in a different manner from those against England. During the last year's political friction with that state, especially friction arising from commercial causes, has not been lacking, and the difficulties that have arisen have mostly been settled by our giving way. As this obliging attitude has its limits, we have to ask ourselves what force we can possibly bring to bear in order to meet the attack of the United States against our interests and to impose our will.

Foresaw a Naval Victory.

"Our fleet will probably be able to defeat the naval forces of the United States, which are distributed over two oceans and over long distances. But it would be a mistake to suppose that the defeat of their fleet will force the United States with its immense resources into concluding peace.

"Considering the great extent of the United States, the conquest of the country by an army of invasion is not possible. But there is every reason to believe that victorious enterprises on the Atlantic coast and the conquest of the most important arteries through which imports and exports pass, will create such an unbearable state of affairs in the whole country that the government will readily offer acceptable conditions in order to obtain peace.

"If Germany begins preparing a fleet of transports at the moment when the battle fleet steams out of our harbors we may conclude that operations on American soil can begin after about four weeks, and it cannot be doubted that the United States will not be able to oppose to us within that time an army equivalent to our own.

"At present the regular army of the United States amounts to 65,000 men, of whom about thirty thousand could be disposed of. Of these at least ten thousand are required for watching the Indian territories and for guarding the fortifications on the sea coast. Therefore, only about twenty thousand men of the regular army are ready for war. Besides, about one hundred thousand militia are in existence, of whom the larger part did not come up when they were called out during the last war. Lastly, the militia is not efficient; it is partly armed with muzzle loaders and its training is worse than its armament.

"The Americans will not feel inclined to conclude peace because one or two provinces are occupied by an army of invasion, but because of the enormous material losses which the whole country will suffer if the Atlantic harbor towns, in which the means of the whole prosperity of the United States are concentrated, are torn away from them one after the other.

Would Levy Tribute.

"Therefore, the task of the fleet would be to undertake a series of large landing operations, through which we are able to take several of these important and wealthy towns within a brief space of time. By interrupting their communications, by destroying all buildings serving the state, commerce and the defense, by taking away all material for war and transport, and, lastly, by levying heavy contributions, we should be able to inflict damage on the United States.

"With the coast cities and the capital occupied, the republic would crumble. We should have no need to occupy the country as a whole; that would be too large a task and would give no advantage. Our purpose would be accomplished when we secured a dominating control over the policy of the United States."—Kansas City Star.

cumstances it is apparent that a sale of government bonds can be easily arranged.

In connection with this discussion it is interesting to call attention to our last war loan which was made on the occasion of the Spanish war in 1898. Those bonds were authorized to the amount of $400,000,000, of which a trifle less than $200,000,000 were issued in denominations of $20 or multiplies thereof. The issue bore a 3 per cent interest rate and it was provided that the bonds should be first offered at par as a popular loan in such a way as to give every citizen an opportunity to subscribe. In alloting the bonds subscriptions of individuals were to be first accepted and the subscriptions for the lowest amount were to be first allotted. The offering met with such a ready response from the public that it was subscribed more than seven times over, and the bonds in a few days soon advanced to 102. The number of subscriptions received was 320,226, the most popular subscription being for $500 bonds of which the number was 180,573. In 1901 these bonds sold at a substantial premium, reaching a price of close to 112.

The amount of funds available for investment at that time was by no means as large as is the case today, and the fact that the war loan of 1908 was so easily absorbed seems to assure the instant success of the present offering. While conditions in the investment field were somewhat different then than now, there seems every reason to believe that the present contemplated issue will be rapidly taken, provided that the interest rate and form meet the approval of the investment public.
